THAT NARROW ESCAPE.

Butcher Bill gets his family about him and discourses to them of "the days when he went play-actin'," a long time ago.

[Told After the Style of the Old Soldier of Blenheim.]

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

Come, Sally, get the kids around,
The vhiles I do rehearse
The deeds we h'asp'rants used to do,
In calm and pleasant verse;
And as the waves o' Time roll back
From Lotty's misty shore,
I'll try and see if I can't live
The "spout shop's" glories o'er.

Har! them was days van eggs vas eggs,
And actors hactors, too,
And dollars dollars vas, and not
Vaste paper, green and blue.
Ven a piece that ran two nights or so,
Vas said t'have had a "run,"
And him that couldn't study three
New "parts" a day vas "done."

Hey, last! and parts, I guess, was parts,
Each forty lengths or more—
Not hash of vords and pantomine,
Vith combats by the score;
And plays vas not of all the sense
That in them vas bereft,
And the bones of the thing vas not
To the scenic hartisees left.

Ah! and ven actors never seen
Beefsteaks but them of vood,
And a purse of goold would larst a life
Time (real, be it understood),
Yes! I have seen them actor chaps
Each night give heaps avay,
And dine in style; then finish off
Vith fried clams—arter the play!

It seems has thof but yesterday
I made my first debut
In a mellow-drammy called "The Blood-
Y Bandit's Biarsted Hut,"
And my broads'ord combats 'licited
A storm o' yells and shouts,
And my brother hactors kindly put
Me through a course o' sprouts.

'Twas hat the little Frankeline
Theayter hit came off;
Bill Selling vos the manadgeer,
Whom had the hoopin cough,
So bad on him that when he played,
To suit the gay galoots,
'Is woice went down so low they 'ad
Toe pump it from his boots.

Vell, thof I didn't take the box,
At least, I "fetched" up pit,
And vhiles the crititix jeered at me
(Loquitur—They allus does, the mussenary wagabones, unless you salts 'em well for a fav'rable notis.)
Folks said I'd made a 'it;
In proof of vich the manadgeer,
Ven to him I aplied
For a regglar engagiment,
Took me to once aside—

And, "Bill," ses 'e, "it's hevident
Fine acsin' is your line,
Althof I hardly think that in
Shakespter you're bound to shine;
Your hagger's good, your woice is good,
And gallant is your manner,
So from the bottom you may rise
By carrying of a banner."

From that I grew to goin' on
For vhat is called "first villians,"
And got so used to stabbin' folks
I could a slaughtered 'em by millions;
Till our 'eavy man was tooken sick,
Ven I vas cast in course
For the lodin bisness, which it means
Love, vengeance and remorse.

My actin' gal, vas of that kind,
At least they used to say,
Ven hanything vas up—"Come Jack,
Let's go see Villiam play;
Ven there's a shecsin' job on hand,
Or some-un's ken to croak,
A hearin' him go on just puts
A feller in the knack."

And boys a meetin' in the street
Vould for each other go,
Acause their parients 'ad said
Bill Simmins does it so,
'Till enerly the pleecemen came
And said:—"you just cork up!
You've converted half this theatre'
Inter theeves and murderers—stop!"

And so it vas at last announced
That Bill would take a Ben'—
A "farewell benefit," that is,
A sort o' partin,' vas
The actor rallies all his friends
And plays his "specials" o'er,
By token that he's shut up shop,
Vont be seen no more.

The evenin' came, the once was full,
From pit to doam vas cramm'd
And hif the Guv'ner and his scot
Vasn't there may I be—lammed!
The bill vas Richard and Macbef,
Vith Amlet's scenes thrown in,
And the vay I gave them eroes fits
You bet you vas a sin!

They could'nt stand it—'twas too mutch.
Before the second ac'
Ven half the audiens rose in tiers
And ask't their money back,
And ven the cavy curtain fell
On Richard's fight, the sov's
Vas a havin' benches on the stage
And boxin' without gloves.

* * * * * * *

Old gal, my tail is nearly told,
My ben turned out a loss—
I bought a string o' sassiges,
Likewise a veteran hoss,
Content for once in other spears
This actin' for to shine;
I married you, and, now, old gal,
I'me in the butcher line!

RAISING CANE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY HAMILTON.

I suppose no one feels particularly gay after having popped the question and been rejected. Neither is receiving the mitten conducive to sleep on the night succeeding its reception. At any rate, Harry Clifford did not feel in high spirits; neither did he feel sleepy on a certain night last October. That afternoon Kitty Karney had refused him—kindly, it is true—but decidedly. He charged more to Kitty's mother than to herself. The Karneys were rich and the managing mother seemed to be determined that Kitty should marry a rich man. Harry was good looking, of good family, but poor. He had never felt the importance of "the root of all evil" till that night. Kitty, he was certain, liked him, but she was under maternal control, very dutiful, very strict, but not very resolute; so the mother, who possessed a nose like the beak of some newly discovered species of parrot, and who possessed the authoritative disposition which that kind of beak implies, ruled her utterly.

So the hatred which men feel towards mothers-in-law was cordial liking compared with the wrath which Harry felt towards the lady, who would not allow herself to be mother-in-law to him. She evidently favored Sam Singer, a very amiable, harmless personage—pious, but not a muscular Christian, inane but very rich; a man who would never make a wife miserable by misuse, but to live with whom would make a lively girl a maniac by the force of dullness very soon. He would make a good husband in Mrs. Molloy's sense. Her beau ideal was "a man who was keerful of his clothes, didn't drink no spirits, and would eat a cold dinner on a washing day," but to tie a quick-witted, intelligent girl to him was like handcuffing a tortoise and a hare together. It might help the tortoise, but it would be hard upon his partner.

The thought of Sam Singer was an additional aggravation to Harry. That Kitty Karney, who had been supported on his arm in many a round dance, who had been his partner in so many Germans, should ever be hugged by Sam Singer seemed sacrilege. He had kissed Kitty once on the sly, and he remembered the taste ("strawberries smothered wid crame"), and to think of Sam's engagement kiss made him swear a swear which was largely compounded of groan.

So you see he was not in that amiable frame of mind in which one gives blind beggars pennies and whistles as one goes for want of thought.

Harry being restless, went to the gymnasium and pitched into the apparatus savagely. Then he put on the gloves with a friend, who soon took them off, saying that Harry hit too hard for a friendly spar, which was true that night. He had hoped that this exercise of his body would calm his mind, but found himself as savage as ever, so he lighted a cigar and started on an indefinitely long walk.

As he was going out of the gymnasium dressing room the Professor came in with a cane in his hand. Harry said:—"Jim, lend me your cane, I'm going to take a long walk." So he departed, armed with a stout grape vine. The stick tacked under his arm, his hands in his coat pockets, the dull red of his cigar gleaming viciously as he pulled savagely upon it, he tramped through street after street, vaguely wandering, in hopes to tire out the demon of restlessness within. Eleven o'clock passed never to return again, and as twelve, "the noon of the silent night" was passing, he heard a cry of "Police!" It is foolish to cry "Police!" when you need it. That cry keeps away most of its hearers, and those who approach do so cautiously. Cry "Fire!" and every man, woman and child, who hears it, rushes for it.

In the daze of Harry, however, the cry roused him like the sound of a trumpet. He felt pugnaciously and longed for any exertement that would take him out of himself. So he ran at the top of his speed towards the spot whence the cry of "Police!" arose at intervals like minute guns at sea. They puzzled Harry as he ran. They were not cries of a man in deadly peril of his life, being too regular and asthma for that. He fancied as he neared the spot that they had a familiar sound and then laughed at the fancy. He turned the corner swiftly and came suddenly upon a scene at once laughable and wrath inspiring. On one side of the street stood a little gentleman, who was held by a brawny ruffian. From this gentleman came the lugubrious bleating that Harry had heard, while every time he called the other man endeavored to slap his face, so that the little man, offering no resistance, was compelled to hold down his head to avoid as much as possible the slaps, and presented a humiliating and laughter provoking spectacle. But nearer to Harry, who took the whole scene in at a glance, was a sight calculated to stir a fever in the blood of age and make the infant sinews strong as steel. It was a young girl struggling in the arms of a great hulking brute, who was endeavoring to kiss her, chuckling diabolically at her terror.

They were close by. Harry had not slackened his pace. A short run on tip-toe and then he launched himself through the air. With the impetus of his run, the weight of his body and the power of his spring, the Professor's stick was brought down upon the rough's head-piece. The tough grape broke in half; the brute stiffened convulsively and fell back as if dead, which he certainly would have been had not his hat happened to be a very stiff crowned one. Then Harry heard a sort of groan from the near side of the street, and in a moment was confronted by a new enemy. But after the manner of novelists we drop this thread of the narrative just here and take up with another one, while the gentle reader holds his breath at Harry's peril, and prays for his deliverance therefrom.

Kitty Karney liked Harry well enough to have fallen in love with him but for her mother. Of course she should have allowed her affections to take their course, but she was a meek little thing and honored her mother as the Scriptures directed. She was sad after her refusal and would have preferred to have spent the evening in her room, but she had promised to go to her aunt's and so she went. Women can conceal their feelings better than men; they have the faculty of suffering secretly. But she was unusually pensive, which became her, and Sam Singer, when he took her on his arm to escort her home, determined to propose on the way.

About the same time two gentlemen emerged from a drinking saloon—Bill Smith, "the Slasher," and Tom Noakes, who had no pet name, but was as great a ruffian as the other. They were cheerful with bad rum. By and by, as they conversed upon topics of interest in the cock-fighting line, they saw a lady and a gentleman walking before them. Then the Slasher said:—

"I say, Tom, you hold this little fellow while I kiss his gal, and I'll hold the next fellow while you kiss his gal."

So, just when Sam Singer was coming to the point he was suddenly pulled away from Kitty by a strong arm. A hoarse voice said:—

"Come over here, young fellow, I want to buzz you," and he was hustled across the street. Now, absence of physical power is no crime, but it is sometimes very disagreeable. There are occasions when strength is more convenient and desirable than wisdom or precious stones—occasions when nothing else will do. This was one of these occasions. Sam was spunky enough, but weak. His struggles were frantic, but unavailing. Then he thought of the guardians of the public peace and cried "Police!" Then he received a slap on the face and was ordered to "shut up." But he didn't; he cried aloud and was cuffed.

By and by he heard a sort of a smash, which sounded somewhat like the breaking of a stick. Then he received a thump in his wind, which knocked him into a breathless heap upon the pavement, and his tormentor was gone.

He went to meet the Slasher's assailant. And he met no little spunky, weak, awkward victim. No, facing him was a young fellow standing five feet ten, weighing 175lbs., of which training could not have taken off more than 10lbs., a young fellow who loafed and played ball in summer, and was a fair gymnast in winter, who was naturally very quick and knew a little about sparring.

Mr. Noakes, like most of his class, was deficient in science, his genius running to rough and tumble fighting. Therefore, after looking at Harry for a moment, he put down his head and made a rush to close. When he reached the spot where Harry was, Harry wasn't there, but his fist was, and Mr. Noakes' nose received the compliment of a sharp upper-cut, whereupon it took on airs and swelled up about the attention. As his head came up Harry caught a whiff of his opponent's breath. "Poor whiskey is bad for the mind," he said to himself, and so he led Thomas Noakes such a chase as rapidly extracted the zephyr from that gentleman's carcase. Thomas being of a practical turn of mind, seeing no particular benefit arising from a conflict in which he had succeeded in chipping the skin from his opponent's temple by a glancing blow, and had received in exchange several lacers, and possibly, fearing the advent of the police, suddenly turned and fled. A little black heap on the other side of the street suddenly straightened up into a man and bolted after him, crying frantically, "Police!"

Harry was at first astonished—then he burst into a fit of laughter. Then he remembered the female. He turned to go to her, and lo! she too was gone. Then he roared. "Upon my word," he said, "it's like a panorama. A minute ago there were five persons here and now I'd begin to believe the whole thing a dream if it wasn't for this fellow here." He went to the Slasher—found him beginning to recover—so he opened his cravat—sat him against the side of a house, and left him blinking gravely at nothing, like an owl. Then he picked up the fragments of the Professor's stick and was walking off, when he thought he saw the edge of a woman's dress on the upper step of a house. Sure enough, there was the lost lady in a half fainting condition. Harry carried her into the moonlight and lo! she was Kitty Karney.

She couldn't walk, but her home was close by and Harry picked her up and carried her to it. I am ashamed to say that, having her fair face so near his mouth, Harry couldn't resist the temptation, and so he kissed her. He supposed she was insensible, but she wasn't and said feebly "Don't!" and Harry "don'ted."

By the time she was being carried up the steps she was sufficiently recovered to think of telling Harry that she had a night key, so that he need not alarm the family by ringing.

Harry put her on the sofa—gave her some brandy, and was slipping a strong dose of the same himself, when a hurried step was heard outside. The front door being ajar, in a moment Sam Singer came into the room on a run. Between fright, loss of breath and the steps he had received, he was more like a ghost than a human being. He stated, after Harry had poured some brandy down him, that in a sort of half bewildered state he had run after his tormentor, he scarcely know why—that as soon as he had got a little way off, the pursued had turned upon him and had chased him through several streets, till the front door ajar of the Karney mansion showed him an ark of refuge.

Then, the brandy working in his weak noodle, he gave a graphic account of what he was just going to do, when Harry appeared; then, going into the maudlin state, he hiccoughed feebly, and requested Harry to take him home to his mother, which Harry did.

The next day Harry called, as a matter of politeness, to see whether Miss Karney had recovered from her fright. Wonderful things had taken place in Kitty's breast in the meantime. She had always liked Harry and would have loved him if she had not been afraid of her mother. To her astonishment she discovered that night that she did love him. What subtle influence brought her to this discovery let he who can fathom that mystery of mysteries, a woman's heart, explain, I cannot. However, it came about, at any rate, when Harry saw her next day, and was asking commonplace about her health, that suddenly her eyes telegraphed to his a message which sent the blood to his heart. It was impossible! His eyes asked a repetition of the message. Again the same thing. His eyes asked, "Shall I," and was answered, "I have said so twice, can't you understand?" Then he understood and acted on it. The mother made a riot when she heard of it, but timid people are often very determined—even obstinate when they take a notion—and as Kitty had a private fortune, the old catamaun was powerless and had to submit.

Harry has the broken grape vine hung up in his study and says that with the aid of that cane he walked into Paradise.

JEM WOLF AND THE TOM CATS.

I knew by the sympathetic glow upon his bald head—I knew by the thoughtful look upon his face—I knew by the emotional flush upon the strawberry end of the old free liver's nose, that Simon Wheeler's memory was busy with the olden time. And so I prepared to leave, because all these were symptoms of a reminiscence—signs that he was going to be delivered of another of his tiresome personal experiences—but I was too slow; he got the start of me. As nearly as I can recollect, the infliction was couched in the following language:—"We were all boys then and didn't care for nothing, and didn't have no trouble, and didn't worry about nothing only to shirk school and keep up a revivin' state of devilment all the time. This Jem Wolf as I was talking about was the 'prentice, and he was the best hearted fellow, he was, the most forgivin' and unselfish I ever see—well, there couldn't be a more bullier boy than he was, take him how you would, and sorry enough I was when I see him for the last time. Me and Henry was always pestering him, and plastering bills on his back, and putting bumble bees in his bed, and so on, and sometimes we'd crowd in and bunk with him not'thstanding his growling, and then we'd let on to get mad and fight across him, so as to keep him stirred up like. He was an ongain, he was, and long and lank and bashful, and we was fifteen and sixteen and toierably lazy and worthless. So that night you know that my sister Mary gave a candy pullin', they started us to bed early, so as the company could have full swing, and we run in on Jem to have some fun. Our window look't out onto the roof, and about ten o'clock a couple old tom-cats got to rarin' and chasin' and swarin' around it and carrying on like sin. There was four inches of snow on the roof, and it was frozed so that there was a right smart crust of ice on it, and the moon was shining bright, and we could see them cats like daylight. First they'd stand off and s-yow, yow-yow, just the same as if they was a cussin' one another, you know, and bow up their backs and push up their tails, and swell around and spit; then all of a sudden the grey cat he'd snatch a handful of fur out of the yaller cat's ham, and spun him round like a button on a barn door. But the yaller cat was game, and he'd come and clinch, and the way they'd gouge and bite, and howl, and the way they'd make the fur fly, was powerful. Well, Jem, he got disgusted with the row, and swore he'd climb out there and shake 'em off that roof. He hadn't reely any notion of doing it likely, but we everlastingly dogged him, and bullyragged him, and 'lowed he'd always bragged how he wouldn't take a dare, and so on, till bime-by he highsted up the winder and lo and behold you, he went—went exactly as he was, nothin' on but a shirt, and it was thin. But you ought to see him. You ought to see him creapin' over that ice and diggin' his toe nails and finger nails in to keep from slippin', and 'bove all you ought to see that garment a flappin' in the wind, and them long, ridiculous shanks of his a glistenen' in the moonlight. Them company folks was down there under the eaves, the whole squad of 'em under that ornery shed of old Washington Bower vines—all settin' round about two dozzen samars of hot candy, which they'd set in the snow to cool. And they was talkin' and laughin' lively, but, bless you, they didn't know nothin' bout the panorama that was goin' on over their heads. Well, Jem he went a sne-akin up unbeknowns to them cats—they was a swishin' their tails and yowyowin', and threatenin' to clinch, you know, and not payin' any attention—he went a sne-akin' right up to the combe of the roof, till he was in a foot and a half of 'em, and then all of a sudden he made a grab for the yaller cat! But, by gosh, he missed fire, and slipped his holt, and his heels flew up and he slopped on his back, and shot off'n that roof like a dart—went a slashin' and a crashin' down through them old rusty vines, and landed right in the dead centre of them company people—sot down like a yearthquake in them two dozen samars of red hot candy and let off a howl that was harf from the tomb! Them gals—well, they looked, you know. They see he wasn't dressed for company, and so they left. All done in a second; it was just one little war whoop and a whish of their dresses and blame the wench of 'em was in sight anywhere? Jem he was in sight. He was gormed with that bilin' hot molasses candy clean down to his heels, and had more beated sasaers hangin' to him than if he was as Injun princess—and he comes a prancin' up stairs just a whoopin' and a cussin', and every jump he gave shed some China, and every squirm he fetched he dropped some candy! And blistered! Why, bless your soul, that poor creature couldn't reely set down comfortable for as much as four weeks.

A SHORT TALE OF A LONG TAIL.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Call From the Chair:—"Hair! Hair!"

Neither pen nor pencil can make, or has begun to make, Louis Napoleon a good looking Emperor, with his fishy, lack-lustre, greenish-gray eyes, his unmistakable Hebraic nose, and especially his stiff gummed mustache, twisted into a long crooked black wire on each side of his "ugly mug." I think he had better let them grow until he can tie them behind his neck, as one of the King of Prussia's porters did once, for which his "Sorenest Possible Highness" bestowed upon him a double pension for life.

Hair is a great thing in these days, and always has been for that matter. A good while ago a very handsome young English actress, wife of an old theatre manager, became famous for having such luxuriant hair that she could stand upright and it covered her to her feet like a veil.

Well, an afflictive accident which befel her one night made her the Mother of the Chignon! Her proud flaxen locks caught fire at a side scene as she was entering upon the stage, and as her "genius" lay in that direction she resolved ever after to play in a wig. So she used to wind this immense quantity of hair round her head, and put over it a capacious thatch, the consequence of which was that her head bore about the same proportion to the rest of her figure that a whale's skull does to his body. What enormous copies of this multitudinary hair have come down to our time!

But thanks to Grace! some hair has been done away with since that period. The sailors don't wear celestial curls any longer (not at all) in the English navy, as they used to do when "George the Third was King," and "thereby hangs a tail"—a tale once told by an old coxswain, which had in it as much fun and as natural play upon words as anything I can at present recall; but I can't remember half of them.

In brief, then, Jerry O'Sullivan, in the forecastle of the Endymion frigate, was lamenting to his messmates the scarcity of pigtails to be seen in his Majesty's service. "They havn't all been cut off, to be sure," he says; "but this is certin, that you see the tail of a comet in the sky as often as you do a pigtail on board a man-of-war. When that old cove Sampson lost his pigtail he lost his strength, and when we seamen lost our'n we lost half our 'lowance of grog, which was half our strength, at all events; for Sir John Fillummore (Fillumless ought to have been his name) when he had our grog rations weakened, argued that having no longer our pigtails to support, so much liquor only got into our heads. This idea staggered their lordships and settled the p'int, so now we've only a pint instead of a quart.

"Now, you see, when I first come into the service, some thirty years ago, I was partitely requested to walk up the ship's side with a cutlass p'inted at me below, to prevent my backing astarn. Pigtails was all the fashion then. There was such combing on the combings in the waist, upon clean shirt days, a man-of-war looked like a big barber's shop and the masts like barber's poles. It was beautiful to see the row of tails, as well as beads, hanging down behind the waistband of the trowsers as perpendicular as a deep sea lead.

"I was mighty eager to have a tail, but it was four years before I stole enough of the cook's slush to bring mine out in full beauty; but it grew at last as big as my wrist and hung down so low that it was aground high and dry when I sat on my chest, with a waving, curly end to it, and black and glossy as a two year-old nigger baby.

"After sarving his Majesty seven years, our ship's company was drafted into another frigate. They call it drafted from the game of draffs, in which you take the men. So we had a new ship and new men, and a new captain. His name was Partridge, and a game fellow he was, but his wife was the captain's captain. When he came aboard he read his commission and made a speech. He said he hoped the ship's company would always be united and then he piped to a division. And instead of walking in front of us, to examine the cut of our jibs, what does he do but walk behind to examine our tails hanging over our starns!

"'Mark that man!' said he to the lieutenant, and so he went on till he had marked eleven of the longest tails among us. Mine was one, and he ordered us eleven on the quarter deck and examined us again. Mine was the longest by an inch!

"'That'll do,' said he. 'What is your name, my good fellow?'

"'Jerry O'Sullivan, at your honor's sarvice,' says I.

"'Then O'Sullivan, you are my coxswain,' said he, 'and these other ten are my boat's crew.'

"'Do you see, my lads, that promotion went by the length of your tail in those days, and mine got for me the best rating in the ship. But it was all a fancy on the part of the captain's wife, who came aboard a day or two after and took command.'

"'What's your name, sir!' said she, as I walked into the cabin at her tail, with a half-grown umbrella and a bundle of cat skins, which she had muffled round her throat.

"'Jerry O'Sullivan at your honora de lady's commands,' replied I.

"'Turn your back, sir,' says she, plumping down on the sofa, 'and let me see your tail.'

"'Sure I knows better manners, madam,' says I, very partitely.

"'Obey my orders, sir, or I shall direct Captain Partridge to give you three dozen,' said she, in a voice like a pay-cock. I show'd her my tail fast enough when I heard that! She was pacified, said it was 'a beauty,' and I was in high favor because my tail hung so low.

"Well, tails were the order of the day in that ship, and beads were good for nothing else but to hang tails onto; the longer the tails, the better the rating, for my lady could only judge of a seaman's merits by the length of his tail, and she took all the trouble out of the captain's hands.

"But though I had the longest tail in the ship, her ladyship didn't like the tale I was telling her pretty maid one fine morning in the side cabin. She heard me tell her that she was 'the pay-soup of my affections,' and that I 'longed for her as a chap does for the scuttle butt on the horse latitudes, or a shark after a four pound piece of pork? I had coiled my arm round her pretty, plump waist, and we were kissing close, when Mrs. Captain Partridge cried out:—

"'What are you about with my maid, Jerry O'Sullivan?'

"'I told her I was only asking her to comb out the tuft of my pig-tail, but she burst out with:—

"'None of your blarney, Sir! I desire my maid to leave you alone, and that you leave my maid alone, and what is more, that you leave the cabin this instant!'

"So I said nothing; but with my tail between my legs, I turned tail out of her sublime presence.

"Mrs. Captain Partridge was in a great rage, and tried hard to get Jerry displaced, by having a rival seaman's cue out-measured by the master-at arms; but the old coxswain kept half an inch the longest, so that he maintained his rating.

But, poor fellow! he came to grief at last; for one day a tail-block' fell from aloft, 'took him right on the head,' knocked him senseless, and the surgeon sent him to the hospital, where they cut off his hair, shaved his head, 'that they might get at the mischief, just as we clear a ship's hold to get at a leak.' Yes; they "cut off his tail to repair his head;" and, when he appeared on board, and it was discovered that he had no tail, he was at once disrated and put among the 'waisters,' to wring the tails of snabs.

Manhalli's "demnition grind" at the mangle was not a more revolting change on daily duty; "so there, d'ye observe," concluded Jerry, to his messmates, "is the end of both my tales."

A SPORTING EDITOR.—A decidedly humorous biography of the sporting editor of the Louisville Commercial was recently published therein, which, as there are several places where the laugh may intrude with propriety, we take the liberty of quoting:—"Our sporting editor is the only one who is not from the north. He is from Georgia, where he was born and partly raised. He amassed quite a fortune during the war by dealing "faro" for Confederate money. But he woke up in the morning after the fall of Richmond a poor man indeed. In his young days he was a race rider, and can now tell the pedigree of any race horse that is mentioned with a fluency that is only excelled by the man who sells blacking on the street corner. After he became too old to ride races, our sporting editor moved to New York and put himself up as a prize fighter, but, finding no one to back him, he retired, went to Washington and carried bricks on the capitol extension for several weeks. Amassing in this a checkered pair of pants, a beaver hat, a striped shirt, red vest and twenty-five dollars in money, he went to New Orleans and kept door in a gambling hell. While there the war broke out, and he joined the Perritt Guards and went out to protect his rights. After 'bracing' the company he deserted and joined an Arkansas regiment and dealt faro as above stated. We have no trouble in sending our sporting editor off after news. The trouble is getting him back. He always gets broke—never wins. He bet his expense money and railroad pass that Allen would whip Mace at New Orleans, and we had to send him money to come home on. This money he lost on a chicken fight, and finally worked his way up the river on a tow boat."

IF we did but know how little some enjoy of the great things that they possess, there would not be much envy in the world.

PERSONAL.

"J. H. B.—Write to me, my dear boy, immediately, and give me your address. If you are in want of money, say so; all will be forgiven. P —(N. Y. Herald personals.)

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

The above, which I clip from the Herald,
Is addressed, I imagine, to me;
At any rate I am the original,
(Genuine, bona fide J. H. B.)
I'll accept the polite invitation
Of this anxious old party, I think,
And embrace this, the first leisure moment
I've had, to just sling him some ink.

I shall not entrust my epistle
To the mail, so uncertain and slow,
But put it in print in the CLIPPER,
In whose columns he'll see it, I know.
So here goes:—"My dear X, I confess to
A very agreeable surprise;
When perusing the Herald this morning
Your 'personal' ad. met my eyes.

"The fact is, I left in a hurry,
For reasons I'll not now explain,
And business important prevents me
Just now from returning again.
How are all the folks? Do the children
Ever ask for, or after me cry?
Tell ——— not to fret or to worry,
I'll be back all O. K. by-and-by.

"How is ———? (I'll not mention
Her name till together we meet.)
Is she pretty and graceful as ever,
And modest and charming and neat?
And the old lady, may heaven preserve her!
I know I am oft apt to err,
But my heart is not hard enough, surely,
To allow me to quite forget her?

"How's biz? Though the season was backward
I guess 'twill turn out pretty well—
Those tremendous hot days we've been having
'Twas thought on the crops must soon tell.
I can't, for the life of me, give you
Any reliable items of news,
Because, lately, I've been very busy
In writing and courtin the Muse.

"Now, as to the matter of money—
How like you I considerate thought!
To tell you the truth, my dear fellow,
For the moment I am rather short!
My address is in care of the CLIPPER,
Box thirty-eight sixty, you know,
To which, at the earliest moment,
Send a couple of thousand or so.

"And I take this occasion to mention
That I shall be dreadfully vexed
Unless this remittance shall reach me
As early as Saturday next.
When you tell me all will be forgiven,
I feel you're too generous, by far;
You touch me—I did not expect it;
What a bully old party you are!

"Now, I bid you good-bye for the present;
Adieu, until Saturday, X;
I shall hold you in high estimation,
I assure you, whatever your sex,
Providing, as I have directed,
You send that remittance to me,
Addressed with a plain superscription—
To your absent, but fond J. H. B."

"OUD ON DER FLY."—NO. 5.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY OOFTY GOOFT.

Dis is a grade blace for doing pisness, Sharley, and id? I dell you dere is a heab of vork ransackded here in der course of dwo or dree days, und a heab of nice glean wriding baper shbiled mit law vords wrid on id. Dese lawyers are a headdy lod of roosders, und der more you know of dem der headier dey gid. Do be sure vonce, und somedimes twice on a vile, you kin find ven or dwo of dem mit hair growing in der middle of deir hands, bud nod wery seldom I kin insure you. Dey are grade fellers, you bed, und dere is chind so many differend breads of dem dot dere is of dorgs. Some of der finest men in der coundy are lawyers, und some of der biggest schallywags. Dere is von ding certain, dere is more dead beaders lawyers dan any oder drade in der vorld. Some of dem is honorapie, high minded gendlemen, dot voodn'd do anyding wrong for der vorld, und oders vood shdeal der gross off of a Jake asses back, und sell id for a bair of susbenders. I dell you, Sharley, dere is many a von in der legal und der llegal profession dot I know, und of dey vill read der CLIPPER dey vill find it out do.

I hafn'd been running round all dese years mit my eyes glosed tight shud, und many a dime ven some of dese roosders dought I vas ashleep I vas beeking und dooking idems. I hafe saw many a ding done dot beoples didn'd dink I seed, und of dey knowed so much like I do dey vood be bosded a leedle bedder as dey are. Vell, vat I know I kin keeb by mineself, und of any von gits anyding oud of me dey'll hafe to shqweeze id oud of me bedween dwo fedder beds. I vas eighdy-nine der day behind yesderday, und I hafe leefed all dese years mitoud saying anyding bad boud any von, und I don'd brobose to begin to commence now. Dwendy minudes afder I vas bulled indo dis vorld dey say I obened my moud, und der nurse dot vas dere says:—"I'll fix him so he voodn'd nefer oben again," und she did. She feeded me on bound a ballin of bow und arrow root, und I ain'd shot my moud off since. A goot many beeples dalk mit deir moud, Sharley, und dey nefer say anyding. Der oney vay to dalk is mit your dongue; den, of you say someding, beeples vill breshiade id, und dey vill undershdood vat you'm dryin to gid drough yourself. See?

Dis young feller adding ad dis desk is a friend of me, und I know id. He is from der Fourdeend Vard, und he has der rebudashun up around Mulberry and Modd shdreed of being a firad rade young feller. I hafe knowd him efer since he firad comed in der office, und I nefer ved heerd any von say anyding against him. No madder vere you codch him he is always der same, und ven you see Jim Connolly von day he is der same Jim dot you med der day before. Der bosishion he oggubies here is a regording clerk, although he often dooks Major Kent's blace ven der gay und feadife Ed. goes ofer to Drook und Duffy's for he's bidayders. Jim Connolly is vell liked by der boys in der office, und in der Fourdeend Vard he'a god so much friends like any von ub dere. Von dime he vas a boleseman, und dey say dot ven he vas oud on bosd he vas so shmard like any of dem—always knowed enuff to go in out of der rain, und be ad der sdashion house der wery minude he'd dime vas ub. Anoder leedle ding:—dey say venefer he vas led off for a hour dot he vood always dake full dime—vood come back before der hour vas ub.

Der nexd von to der feller dot used to vas on der bolice is a young gendleman by der glassical name of Murphy—Padrick Murphy—und, although der name is Idalian, der gendleman who vears id in dis office nefer vas in Idaly, und sind often god a Roman nose. Mister Murphy is a Firad Varder, from down vere der Casdle Garden hangs out, und vere der Baddery is full ub mit Dudchmans fresh from der said oceans. His is der vard dot vas always in drouble, und I shbose always vill be. Mister John Fox, von of der Young Demogracy, comes from dis vard, und at der coming elecshion dere vill pe some varm und lifely times down dere. Some of dem vild fellers vill be valking on von anoder's heads before der day is after, und dere vill be more ears und shnouds laying round loose der nexd morning den vould fill a goot size bushel basked. Murphy is vell bosded on bolidics, und is von of der mosd usetul men in or oud of der office. He knows a ding or dwo, und vat he don'd know ain'd vorth anyding to anybody. He knows enuff to dread efery von dot comes in der blace like a gendleman, und so long as he does dot he vill hafe efery body for he's friend.

Ofe dot corner, looking indo dot round box, is a young, or I dink I introduced you mit a long dime since, id he is von of der greadest roosder: in der hole blace. He is Sharley McCafferty, Sharley, from der 19d Vard, und von of der greadest young fellers in der Coundy Clerk's office. He is der von dot bulls der names of der churymens oud of dot veel dot you see long side of him, und of you vant somedime to got on der chury go und ask Sharley of he voodn'd blease bull your name oud. He is from der 19d Vard, und vas abbinded by Aid. Terry Farley. Der Alderman und him is great friends, und dey like von anoder boody vell. Sharley McCafferty is so full of fun like a egg dot's full of mead, und ven he cuds loose he is firad rade combany. He goes down soud efery vonce on a vile, avay down in Virginia, und I bleef some of he's beebles lefts down dere. Veuefer I go indo der Coundy Clerk's office he always is got someding funny to dold me, und many a leedle gwied laugh him und me has togedder dot der read of der ahdudents dey don'd know someding aboud. Sharley is a firad rade No Von A young feller, und anyding dot he says I vill made goot for.

Dis dark bomblexioned young feller mit der black musdash is Dafe Henriques, from der 16d Vard, und von of Manny Hart's abboindments. Dafe is a firad rade, goodhearted young feller, und vot he don't know is villing to learn. He vas formerly a broker down in Broad street, und kept on broking till he got broke himself, und den gwid id. He has peen down here now for der last dree years,

NOTICE.

☞ CORRESPONDENTS, advertisers, and all others writing in relation to matters connected with this or any other department of the CLIPPER, are respectfully requested to address their favors to the editor and proprietor, and thereby avoid omissions, mistakes and confusion which are likely to occur when such communications are addressed to our assistants.

NOTICE.

ADVERTISERS must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

To Correspondents.

ROMEO, N. Y.—1. The necessary qualifications for becoming a F. A. M. are said to be strict integrity, perfect manhood in a physical point of view, and sufficient funds for initiation, etc. 2. To join the fraternity, apply to a mason or at a lodge. 3. Admission, 75c.; reserved seats in dress circle, $1; orchestra and balcony, $1.50; second circuit about the same; family circle, $67; family circle, 480; private boxes, $8. Total, 1,625.

A. W., Washington, D. C.—1. An ace at cribbage counts only with deuce, tray, etc., is a sequence, and not with king, queen, etc. 2. If Jack is the lowest trump out at "seven up," and is captured by the ace, the party capturing is entitled to only one point for the Jack; the point for low belongs to the party to whom Jack was dealt, just as much as though it were a deuce. 3. Thanks for your invitation, but distance declines handing any enchantment to the view.

PHILO.—1. The fastest walking time on record for one mile is 6 minutes 43 sec., by W. Boyd; 5 miles have been walked in 28:32, by Geo. Topley, in England. 2 miles in 1 hour 13 min. 45 sec., by the same pedestrian. Chas. Westhall walked 10 miles in 1 hr 2m 26 minutes. 4. The fastest two mile time is 15:59, by A. Underwood. The time you say you made is very good. 5. There is no record of time for the lesser distances, to our mention.

A READER, Little Rock.—The dealer having taken the trick, and the adversary having taken three tricks, the former is entitled and the opposite party scores two points for the game. Under any circumstances the player who has the responsibility of the trump is wrecked if he fails to secure three tricks, and two points is always the penalty for being euchred.

BILL.—"A dispute arose in the playing sledge. The game stood five and five; each party made high, game; the other low, Jack. The party making high-game, claims out; the claim low-Jack, goes out before high, game. How is it?".....Low, Jack goes out before high, game. The cards run out in this order—high, low, jack, game.

PISCIOLA, Albany.—Most of our yacht clubs now sail by canvas measurement. Match races for money or a purse, for a distance of twenty miles, two miles to a round, is general. A sloop, deck boat, or schooner, but in regularly organized yacht clubs, sailing by deck measurement a twenty-mile race, only one and a half minutes per foot is now allowed.

PHILIP FRANKE, Woodstock, R. I.—According to the American application of the word, Liverpool, Eng., is a city; but in England, boroughs corporate, that are or have been the seat of a bishop, or the capital of his see, are the only places to which the title of city is given, and according to this accepted acceptation the term, Liverpool is not a city.

HARVARD 74, Boston, Mass.—1. We cannot decide who is the handsomest lady on the American stage. 2. Miss Monague and Lucy Rushton returned to England some time since. A letter addressed to Miss Emily Pitt, in care of The Era office, London, Eng., will probably reach her. 4. No. 5. Swandell. 6. Yes.

W. B., Gloversville.—Bets are off on the Atlantic and Mutual match at Troy; also on the Atlantic and Haymaker match which followed, owing to the playing of McMullen and Geary in the one, and Martin in the other, except in cases where those betting were aware of the composition of the contesting nines at the time of bet.

DAUNTLESS.—Our opinion is that A wins, as the Dauntless did beat the Cambria. The fact of their mutually agreeing to do away with the limit of time, because it was impossible for either vessel to complete the required distance in the time originally specified, has nothing to do with it.

A PHILADELPHIAN.—Your communication complaining of a certain club and player is not noticed simply because anonymous. When you write to us please to write a letter of business, and give your real name and address; it will not be published unless you request; but we need it as authority.

J. W.—Lotta made her first appearance in this city, June 1st, 1864, at Niblo's Saloon (which is now the dining room of the Metropolitan Hotel) in the character of Jenny Leatherlungs in the farce of "Jenny Lind." 2. Edwin Thorne, now playing at Lina Edwin's Theatre, is the same person.

W. H. S., Lawrence, Mass.—The Columbia, belonging to the Cunard line of steamships, went ashore on Sable Island in 1865, whilst in charge of a pilot. The mails, passengers and cargo were safely landed. We believe that the Atlanta, belonging to this line, was also wrecked.

URO, Philadelphia.—"Bassini's Art of Singing" is most in use. The price of it is $4. 2. Smoking, if indulged in to excess, is injurious to the voice. 3. It is not necessary to observe any particular diet.

OLD BUFFER.—We have not seen the party of late years, but our impression is that he is the identical man who used for his stake seven years ago. Chief of Police Campbell can probably make the matter clear.

DIXIE.—A special agreement having been entered into between A and the "third party," it puts aside the rules so far as said "third party" was concerned; consequently he or they should wait till A and B have played their game out.

HARICK.—Harry Ford, who is now proprietor of the bar and restaurant at 1,133 Broadway, this city, and wife whom John C. and James Heenan resided for some time, never appeared in the prize ring.

HARRY, Wheeling, W. V.—1. Kila Chapman, although very clever in her songs and dances, is not considered as good as Lydia Thompson. 2. It would be hard to say who is the best female clog dancer in the world.

H. W.—Barnum's Museum, which was located in the Chinese Assembly Rooms, on Broadway, above Spring street, was opened to the public on Nov. 12th, 1866, and was destroyed by fire March 3d, 1868. The fire broke out at 12¼ o'clock A. M.

ALEXANDER, Boston.—We have no room to spare for all enumerated in your budget. Look over your files of the CLIPPER and you will therein find the various performances recorded from time to time.

J. J. B., Boston Highlands.—Judge Curtis' 1:43¼ is the fastest authentic even mile time on record in this country. Gladiateur's time, 1:39, and Haunter's 1:40 2-5 are not official, but the records given by the London sporting journals.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa.—The lady you inquire about played juveniles and walking ladies for a time at Maguire's Opera House, San Francisco, Cal., but her health failing her she retired from the stage and is now living with her parents at Vallejo, California.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—There is such a park in Philadelphia, and it is the largest we have any knowledge of; as yet it is in a crude state, but a small portion of it being completed. It takes in the romantic Wissahickon and other natural scenery.

TAYING HARD TO SUIT.—1. Hair dressers sell washes and powders for that purpose. 2. Follow nature's laws for the promotion of good health. 3. Make personal application to some theatrical manager.

BOSTON.—1. We shall probably publish the census returns of the principal cities, etc., when they shall have been officially promulgated. 2. It is a trainer's secret, and you will have to apply to one; probably Mr. Wm. Clark may give you the information.

GUS, Washington, D. C.—The Great Republic was the largest vessel ever launched in this country. She was 350ft. long, 80ft. breadth of beam, 31ft. 6in. deep, and her custom house measurement was 4,600 tons.

C. B., Chicago.—Under our law called the Gambling Act he would have to bring suit against the stakeholder, but certainly A, having lost and authorized the stakeholder to pay the money to D, could hardly be so unprincipled as to sue to get it back.

J. MCK.—You have not made your question sufficiently definite. The elder hand having played a card before you had discarded, the card so played must remain. It is customary to let the trump card remain until it is time to play it. Is this what you desire to know?

CEDAR, Saratoga.—The distance from home base to second base is 127ft. 4in., and that from pitcher's position—front line—to home base, 45ft. The pitcher stands any where he likes within his six feet square.

KEMBLE, St. Louis.—1. C. K. Fox was born in Boston, Mass., Aug. 15th, 1833. 2. Tony Denier is the only three fingered clown in America.

R. R., Philadelphia.—1. Jennie Lind was born in a small village near Stockholm, Sweden. 2. Christine Nilsson was born in a small hamlet in the south of Sweden.

W. M. S.—1. Mons. Selgrist is the father of the children that are traveling with Van Amburgh's Menagerie and Circus. 2. Yes. 3. No.

H. G. H.—The only proper way to act in the premises would be to procure an introduction through some relative or acquaintance of the lady.

A. F. W., Montague.—A horse trotting under a new name, without giving the one he last trotted under, is ineligible, and has no right to the purse he wins.

ENGLISHWOMAN.—1. The 16th of June, 1839, was Sunday. 2. The writing is rather bold for the English pointed style adopted by ladies in that country.

NERVOUS.—B having bet that the Mutuals would win, and the game terminating legally without their winning, our opinion is that B loses his bet.

MYSTIC, New Haven.—1. They appeared on the field near enough to the time to save a forfeit. 2. The Socials forfeited by a score of 9 to 0.

SONG AND DANCE, W. Va.—1. Billy Emerson was born in Belfast, Ireland, July 4th, 1846. He is of medium size. 2. No. 3. From 40 to 80 dollars.

JOHN WATERS, South Brooklyn.—Cheese is sometimes a singular and sometimes a plural noun, but nevertheless cheeses is a proper term to use in speaking of cheese numerically.

BEAR GULCH.—In the absence of rules, the custom in vogue must be our guide, which gives the first and second prizes to the two who threw forty, they throwing off for choice of prizes.

O. S. F., Milwaukee.—Sufficient official returns have not yet been made public to warrant us in giving you the correct information at present.

A MINER.—Fistiana contains an admirable treatise on training for a pugilistic combat. You can procure a copy by enclosing $2.50 to Ed. James, whose advertisement appears in another column.

J. K. O., Athens, O.—Fanny Ludlow's name was changed to Sue Dougherty. She broke down and has gone to the stud, as has also Ontario.

F. C., Fan Farm, Pa.—We don't understand what you mean by paying for a draw. You can stand your hand without drawing if you wish.

GAME COCK, Saratoga.—1. A pyle is one with red and white, or blue and white feathers. 2. Yes. 3. Yes. 4. No such pictures are published in this country.

J. H. R.—According to the wording of the wager, as submitted to us, our opinion is that the bet stands, whether Mr. L. withdraws or not.

EUCHRE.—A having taken it up and declared to play alone, C cannot play alone against him. A having made but four tricks is entitled to one point only.

JASPER, Washington, D. C.—The party mentioned is a member of that club, and also proprietor of a dance hall on Mercer street, near Bleecker.

F. M.—The two highest officers in rank in the Army of the United States are Wm. T. Sherman, General, and Phil. H. Sheridan, Lieutenant General.

R. H. F., Philadelphia.—There is no authentic record of the best three standing jumps. We are informed that Bob Way has cleared over 44 feet.

ROSE NICKLE.—The cut of which you send a proof is different from our usual style and would not look well in the paper, therefore we prefer not to insert it.

FANNY, Exeter, N. H.—1. Boston has a larger population than Albany. 2. The Harvards did beat the Mutuals before they went on their tour and also defeated the Haymakers while on their tour.

H. W., Pittsburgh.—Our opinion is that the wager does not apply to those whose selection the law makes compulsory, without regard to party.

HAMLET.—Mr. Edwin Booth's re-appearance in this city will depend upon the length of time "Rip Van Winkle" may continue to prove attractive.

DILLON.—We do not think a comic concert of the style you mention would pay, owing to the difficulty of securing competent artists.

J. E. S.—One fraction is the half of two fractions of the same denomination and one fourth is, therefore, the half of one half.

C. S. H., Hoboken, N. J.—The father of Miss Maggie is living in this city.

MRS. Mrs. Mordaunt played Moppy in "Frits" during the last two weeks of J. K. Emmett's engagement here.

J. W. T., Academia, Pa.—It is pronounced as if spelled "Froo-Froo."

J. H. T., Buchanan, Pa.—Where there is a tie for game, the non-dealer takes the point.

H. S. F., Stamford.—It is so stated, but we have no direct knowledge that such is the fact.

CONSTANT READER, Cincinnati.—We cannot say, for certain, but it is probable that Appleton, of this city, can get it for you.

J. S.—We cannot give you the route ahead of the earthquake this week.

PHILADELPHIA.—1. Clara Louise Kellogg was born in Hartford, Conn. Her mother is still living. 2. Cannot say.

J. F. M., Boston, Mass.—Mr. Fechter played at the Lyceum Theatre, London, Eng.

WARD, Dubuque, Ia.—The muzle sit on either side of the middleman.

C. L., Lynchburg, Va.—Miss Rose Rand, the actress, does not reside in Philadelphia, and she is not married.

IAGO, Springfield, Ill.—Items will be acceptable. The one you referred to was anticipated in our past issue.

TURF, Providence.—Dan Mace drove Lady Thorn in her first trot this spring on the Prospect course.

RENEAW.—Not having noticed the article you refer to, it is unnecessary to refer to it in the CLIPPER.

J. J., Governor's Island, N. Y.—Directions always accompany the game. There is no book on the subject.

WOOD, East Brooklyn.—Mr. Trussell was shot in a drinking saloon.

A. R. BARTLETT, St. Clair, Mich.—No clubs defeated the Reds in 1869.

S. A. N.—No. I had no right to go alone; his three tricks give him two points, he having euchred No. 4.

F. E. M., Chicago.—Thanks for your kind offer, but we have been "negotiating" to that end.

L. V. W.—"Modest Quencher" may be able to accommodate you. Address him in our care.

A. J., Cincinnati.—They did not. They only defeated the Philadelphians by two points.

F. W. B., N. Norris.—We don't know the lady—is she a professional? If so, send letter in our care.

ATLANTIC, Glenwood.—Forty-one minutes for the shell.

ALBERT, Mount Vernon.—See answer to Florida.

H. R. J., Port Ewen.—We are not in that line—you had better let it alone if you do not wish to get "taken in."

W. B. C., Des Moines.—From Pringle has not had a game during the past year. She is now in front to Leamington.

MORRIS, Washington, D. C.—Make no arrangement, we will attend to it.

J. C. B., Kansas City, Mo.—Terms will be accepted by letters so as to reach here by Monday morning of each week. Mail your favors in the new play of "Jack."

T. A. HOGAN.—1. Lotta is playing in Boston at the Boston Theatre. 2. No. 3. She is not engaged to be married to any person. 4. Address Mr. O'Rourke, Gustavus V. Brooks was last heard from on a passage to Australia.

F. M. N., Erie, Pa.—The poems of Park Benjamin were published by Burd and Houghton, of this city. We have no knowledge of the number of persons present at the St. Louis fair.

H. G.—The "implements" of the game are the ball, bats and bases only.

Old Subscriber, Auburn, N. Y.—See account in brief elsewhere in this issue.

JAS. F. G., Pawpaw, Ill.—All bets made on the match in question should be decided in favor of Mr. Conway, as it was a regular game.

T. ALBERT, Hoboken.—Such a game would be a strong team, but they cannot be had.

H. J. G.—You will find the scores of the Mutual defeats in this issue.

N. O. G., New Orleans.—We are not informed as to the commercial standing of the firm.

BISHOP, Bangor, Me.—Thank you; come again whenever convenient.

J. H., Detroit, Mich.—See answer to Johnstown, Pa., in present issue. The letter will be attended to.

J. W. B., Stapleton.—We speak of are still in this office.

J. H. L., Rochester.—It is a forfeit on the part of the absent man, and the money is yours.

J. R. W. K.—Lightstown, Ind.—You will see solutions given in this issue which will aid you in working out problems.

CONSTANT READER, Philadelphia.—Miss Effie is 25 years of age.

A. J., Albany, N. Y.—Accept thanks for information and offer.

READER, Brandenburgh.—The game is forfeited. Bets are off.

A. B., Worcester.—Goldsmith Maid is about 13 years old.

MIX, Philadelphia.—A loser.

SUBSCRIBER.—We have the number you want.

J. H. L.—You may use it at some future time.

A. M. E., New Haven.—Will be used—probably in our next.

PASTIME, Phil'a.—We cannot say.

J. S., Columbus, Ga.—Such items will be very acceptable.

SUBSCRIBER, Boston.—A medical fraternity.

SOSPITA.—We do not need one at present.

CHARLEY GLEASON.—One dollar and fifty cents.

ANNIE.—Gloversville is in Fulton county, New York.

G. S. W., Chicago.—Send so as to reach us by Monday morning.

S. B. J.—Certainly not. Buy a book and post yourself.

HARRY BLUFF.—She was his wife.

CASPER Co., Md.—The challenging club.

W. A. H.—Neither.

EARTHQUAKE IN THE METROPOLIS.

—We had a real, original, genuine earthquake in this city on Thursday morning, Oct. 20th, about half-past eleven o'clock, and so severe was the shock that many buildings swayed to and fro like a gentleman who is just beginning to feel his oats in the first phase of a spiritual jamboree. We speak from personal feeling in this matter when we say that the CLIPPER Building, one of the most substantial and strongly built edifices in the city, was so effected by the underground current as to slightly move for the space of full fifty seconds. The effect upon these in the building was a dizzy sensation, something akin to that experienced by a person who has been "swinging in the lane," and articles hanging loosely around were given a motion like that of the pendulum of a clock. That it was a live earthquake there is not the shadow of a doubt, and "Our Jim" says that not only did the shock make the earth quake, but it also made the people quake. Envious newspaper men in cities south of us, where the earthquake did not touch, are endeavoring to create the impression that it was no great shakes after all, and that we have been needlessly alarmed. What will our detractors next attempt when they so ruthlessly endeavor to rob us of our well-deserved earth quake laurels?

WARM PLACES.—Brother Beecher, in a sermon preached before his Plymouth flock a couple of Sundays ago, took the bold stand that hell is NOT made up of brimstone and fire; and this, coming from such good authority, has created a better feeling among certain of the boys, who have been rather uneasy in their minds touching the status of the place many of them are on the road to. Some of the worthy brother's ministerial associates are sadly shocked at his want of faith in the orthodox condition of Satan's dominions, and assert that, if his views obtain credit and approval, one of the props of the church will be knocked away, and the edifice will be endangered thereby. We don't know much about the subject, and prefer that our holy brethren should settle the question among themselves. "Our Jim" says that, if it's any hotter down there than it was in New York the past summer, he don't want to go there; and there are others like unto him who would prefer to risk it in New York. Brother Beecher has thus gained the good will of the boys, and we verily believe that he may now travel in the worst places of this city, night or day, without fear of molestation.

THE FESTIVE SEASON.—We have fairly entered upon a season of festivities, and New York is now the liveliest place outside of France. Theatricals, minstrelsy, shows, balls, parties, chowders, target shoots, and plucking of political leaders are all in order now, and if a person cannot find enjoyment in one or the other he must be a very cranky sort of individual and had better change his quarters at once. Broadway looks like an uncultivated flower garden, with every variety of blooming and budding plants, but with plenty of weeds trying to choke the life out of them. The theatres and halls of music—of which we have nearly two dozen in operation now—are nightly attended by "appreciative," if not crowded audiences. And if you wish to "join in the dance, boys," you can put in every night in the week, Sunday not excepted. And then look at our mass meetings and banner raisings, where else in the whole world will you find such entertainments? And free as the wind that blows around them. Surely New York is the garden spot of this terrestrial globe, and immense is its profit from its "plants" and other verdant growths.

THE GUNNING SEASON.—Our sporting friends who delight in a day's shooting have been cleaning out their breech-loaders preparatory to their annual pursuit of the feathered tribe, the season just now opening. Such being the case, let us suggest to baggage masters and like officials on railroads that our shooting friends are not to be plucked like the birds they are in search of, but are entitled to civil and just treatment. Heretofore it has been the practice with some baggage masters to demand extortionate rates for the hunting dogs accompanying their owners, in some instances a higher fare being charged for the dog than for the master, and if the latter remonstrated, or objected to paying such exorbitant charges, the railroad official would probably let a trunk fall, "accidentally," upon the dog, and thus end the discussion at once. There is no objection to paying a reasonable price for the transportation of dogs, but our shooting friends have just cause to rebel against the extortions practiced upon them. Let the directors of railroads, who are probably not aware of the actions of their employees, set this matter right.

"OUR JIM" hates sickness like poison. At the first symptom Jim gobbles down pills like they was sugar plums. He came whining and wailing to us this morning. "What's the matter?" we asked. "I'm sick—I'me jist tuck six pills." "Well," we replied, "if you continue to swallow six pills whenever you have sick spells, they will soon be putting at the bottom of your obituary:—

We had a little Jimmy once,
He was our darling pride;
He loved six pills perhaps too well—
Of sick spells soon he died."

BIG THING.—Indians about. On Thursday evening, Oct. 27th, we are to have a grand torchlight procession, fireworks without number, and music ad lib., all under the direction of Tammany. If it excels the brilliant demonstration of last year, as we are told it will, the display will certainly be worth a journey to see. Fourteenth street, from Third to Fifth avenue, will be a blaze of light.

THE CHAMPION PIGEON SHOOTER.—We recently published John Taylor's sweeping pigeon shooting challenge to Ira Paine, "or any other man," but we believe the deft remains unanswered. It used to be said that it "takes nine tailors to make a man." If this axiom holds good now, we should like to know how many of our professed crack shots it would take to make a Taylor.

FIGHT.—Those advocates of temperance, brothers Tilton and Fulton, have had a shy at each other, the charge in both cases being indulgence in unholy beverages. Tilton declares that Fulton drank several glasses of lager bier. If the latter becomes one Full-ton in the early stages of his beer drinking, may he not grow to be a Tee-tonner as he progresses?

PRIZE BABY.—At an exhibition of babies lately given at the Madison County, Mo., Fair, Mrs. Lizzie C. Barrel was awarded the first prize for the best male baby over one and less than two years old. Was it a double headed Barrel, or in what did its superiority lie? for no barrel is complete without two heads.

"OUR JIM," reading about the great Sioux chief, "Wat. Abustah," being before the Peace Commissioners, bristled up and remarked that the Indian wasn't the only one, for he believed that Mrs. McQuade, his fat landlady, might also be called "Wot a buster?"

WE WENT to a missionary meeting last Sabbath night, and they took up a collection by the way. As we saw the loose change going into the baskets, we wondered whether in reality that change made any change in the heathen.

THE FRENCH ALL RIGHT.—It's always the darkest the hour before day—the tide must turn at last. We are glad to hear that France's train of warriors is to be further augmented by Francis Train from America.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Weekly Record of the Decease of Prominent Individuals.

DUDGEON, Capt. Alphonse—Late commander of the General transatlantic Company's steamer Pereire. He was born at Granville, a seaport town of France. For saving the steamship Vesta, which he commanded, after her collision with the American steamer Arctic, and at great personal risk, he was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. Chevalier of the Order of Saints Maurice and Lazare, and Chevalier of the Order of Isabella la Catholique. On the 21st of January, 1869, while in command of the steamship Pereire in a very heavy gale of wind, he sighted his vessel after she had been struck by the sea with great force, and ran imminent risk of sinking. For the skill he displayed on this occasion Captain Duchesne was promoted to the rank of Officer of the Legion of Honor, and appointed Officer of the Legion of Medjidie. Captain Duchesne commanded, at various times, the steamships Vesta, Danube, Louisiana, Washington, Europe and Pereire. As a commander he was one of the most popular that ever left this port.—Soulliac, Belgium, Oct. 6th, aged 47.

DYER, George—Of Brighton, Eng., a well known "sport"—Brighton, Eng., Oct. 2.

FORBRIGER, Rudolph—Of Georgetown, and proprietor of the well known "Forrest Hall" of that place—Died suddenly while smoking his tobacco, at Georgetown, D. C., Oct. 16th, aged 61.

HUNTER, John C.—a prominent citizen of Pennsylvania. After studying law (in which he became a proficient) he entered actively into politics as a member of the whig organization, and was elected to the State Legislature, serving several terms. In 1856 he was elected a delegate to Congress from the Tenth district of Pennsylvania, and was re-elected in 1858.—Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 11.

JAMES, Charles—President of Philadelphia—Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 18th, aged 101.

MOFFATT, Capt. Isaac F.—Of the Ninth United States Cavalry and a native of Philadelphia, Pa.—Fort Quitman, Texas, Oct. 2d aged 38.

OLMSTEAD, Rev. James MURSON—D. D. of the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Olmstead was born at Stillwater, N. Y., Feb. 17th, 1794. He entered Union College in 1816, and graduated in July, 1819. In November of the same year he entered the Theological Seminary at Princeton, N. J., where he continued until the Spring of 1823, when he was licensed to preach—Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 16th, aged 76.

PETERSON, Chas. J.—Of the firm of J. Peterson & Co., of Philadelphia—Died from the effects of a piece of sponge lodging in his throat, which he had been using to relieve chronic inflammation, caused by accidentally drinking a glass of hartshorn seven years ago—Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 17th, aged 53.

PHILLIPS, Alfred—Father of Miss Adelaide Phillips, the vocalist, Marshfield, N. Y., Oct. 16th. See particulars in another column.

RICHARDS, Rev. George—Late pastor of the North Congregational church in Bridgeport—Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 20th.

RALPH, DR.—He was prominent in the Canadian rebellion of 1837, and was tried in the City of Toronto for treason, but under the proclamation of amnesty he returned to Canada and reentered public life, and was at one time a member of the Canadian ministry. He established the People's School of Medicine, and was the Medical Department of Victoria College, one of the first medical schools—Toronto, Canada, Oct. 19, aged 84.

ROSCHELL, Joseph Augustus—A celebrated singer—Goshen, North Berwick, Sept. 19th, aged 57. See particulars in another column.

RIDGWAY, Hon. Robert—A distinguished public man and journalist of Virginia. In 1833 he became one of the editors of the Richmond Whig, and remained in that journal until the war broke out. At the close of the war he became its chief editor, and remained so till 1865, when he became a candidate for Congress, and was elected. He served during last winter in the Senate of Virginia.—Amherst county, Va., Oct. 16th.

TOWNSEND, James—a retired sea captain—met his death by falling through a treadleworkon the Harlem Railroad—Morrisania, N. Y., Oct. 18th, aged 67.

WALLACE, William—Well known in Philadelphia as a liquor merchant—Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 15th, aged 51.

PEDESTRIANISM.

THE JUMPING CHAMPIONSHIP.—$300 UP FOR SEARLES TO JUMP WAY ON ANYBODY.—The paragraph which appeared in our issue of Oct. 22d, correctly stating the progress of negotiations for a match between Ned Searles and Bob Way, did not have the effect of bringing the latter to time, nor has he said anything further regarding the matter, albeit he was seemingly so red hot for a match with the former conqueror and present champion. We have been written upon by a friend of Sing Sing, however, who, in the hope of inducing Way to "come up" to his late challenge, which didn't bar anybody, desires us to repeat his offer made last week, viz:—to match Searles against Way, or any man breathing, to jump one single standing jump, spirit level, eight trials, spring shoes barred, for from $1,000 to $5,000 a side, at any place, except Middletown, within a radius of two hundred miles from Sing Sing. To prove that there is no bounce in this he has deposited in our hands the sum of $300, which is to be increased to $500 by each party at the time of signing articles. He wishes Way, or his representatives to meet him at the CLIPPER Office between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock, P. M., on Thursday, Oct. 27th, to draw up articles of agreement and make arrangements for the match. Unless Way either accepts this proposition or gives a plausible reason for declining to do so, he will appear in no enviable light before the public; but we hope that he will promptly agree to the terms offered and "come down with the dust."

MILE RACE IN CANADA.—GOOD TIME.—A half mile foot race, for a purse offered by the Turf Club, came off at Prescott, Canada, on the 19th inst., the competitors being D. G. Macdonnell of Morrisburg, J. Smith of Prescott, and R. Stitt of Spencerville. The purse was given for the purpose of bringing out the best runners in Canada for that distance, and had the desired effect, for 2:12, the fastest time on record in Canada, we believe, was made by Macdonnell, the victor, who took the lead at once, closely followed by Stitt, Smith a yard behind at the quarter, which was done in 1:02. They ran in the same positions until the last 100 yds., when all three ran nearly abreast, but Mac finally won by 2 yards. The judges were Daniels and Walsh. Macdonell, who stands 6 feet in height and weighs 137lbs., is also credited with making the fastest mile time in Canada, viz:—4:45¼, in his race with Stitt on Sept. 24th, and also the fastest half mile on snow shoes, viz:—2:37. J. Smith is 5ft. 8in. in height and weighs 132 lbs. He has won a number of races. R. Stitt stands 5ft. 4in. and weighs 141lbs, and ranks as a fast runner in Canada.

CARNDELL AND HARRIS.—$200 MORE FOR THE FORMER.—The long pending negotiations between Hen Crandell and James Harris, the "Cleveland Boy," have about reached a climax, and the match may now be considered as good as made, the epistle from Phil. Miller, which appeared in our issue of Oct. 22d, having induced Crandell to draw up articles and forward the following letter; the $200 alluded to therein have been received by us, making $250 now in our hands on Crandell's behalf:—

NORWICH, N. Y., Oct. 21st, 1870.

FRANK QUEEN.—DEAR SIR.—I hereby offer to run Harris for $200 as a forfeit to run Harris a 75 yard race for $1,000 a side, on the same conditions as the race we ran at Middletown. The race is to be run at Oneida, which is situated on the Central road, 97 miles west of Utica. I think it will be easier for both parties to run there, as there is a good track close to the town. I think I have come farther and been to more expense than Harris; but, as there has been so much talk, to let every one know that I mean business alone, I will allow him $50 for expenses so run them. I have forwarded articles to Mr. Miller, which I hope he will sign and forward the amount required to you, as it is getting too late for newspaper talk.

Yours very truly,
HENRY CRANDELL.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YARDS' MATCH.—A match has been made between Thomas Richards, of Wilkesbarre, and William Roberts, of Kingston, to run 150 yards on the race course at Scranton, Pa., on Saturday, Nov. 12th, both men to be on the scratch at 2 o'clock P. M., precisely, or the man not present to forfeit the money down. By the articles we are made final stakeholders, but we must decline acting in such capacity in this match in all cases of whatever kind; consequently those interested must select some one else, notifying us of the person so selected that the money may be transferred to him, either now or when the whole amount has been posted.

KENDRICKS VS. BURGESS.—The following, from John Forbes, the Canadian sporting man, will interest Bill Kendricks and his backers:—

WOODSTOCK, C. W., Oct. 19th, 1870.

FRIEND QUEEN.—Hearing that Mr. William Kendricks is anxious for a go at Burgess, I will give him a chance. If he will come here to Woodstock, I will give him $50 for expenses and will match Burgess against him for $500 a side, 75 yards, scratch start, to run in two or three weeks from time of making the match. If this suits Mr. Kendricks he can have a race. My business is such that I cannot get away from home, or I would run him in Paterson or anywhere else. JOHN FORBES.

SPORT AT OMAHA.—A series of sporting events came off at the Driving Park, Omaha, Neb., on the 13th inst. The first was a race between Davidson, the ped., and Ed. Fenery's "Boston Boy," the former to run half a mile while the horse trotted a mile, the latter being allowed 25 seconds. The horse won. Jack Goulding then performed his half hour feats, after which a foot race, 100 yards, was run between W. O. Sanders, Churchill, Turner and Darnell, the former winning the first prize, Churchill the second. In a half mile race Darnell defeated Churchill.

TWO MILE WALK.—W. Binns, of Poplar, and G. Hollingbury, of Hackney, met at the Prince of Wales grounds, London, Eng., on Oct. 1st, to walk two miles for £20, the former being allowed a start of 280 yards. At the end of the first mile—done in 7:36—Hollingbury had decreased the gap to 108 yards; he continued to gain, and as they entered the straight for the finish was but 30 yards behind, but was unable to overtake him, Binns winning by two yards in 15:16 2-5. A match was made immediately afterwards, in which Binns receives 200 yards start for £20 a side.

OWEN T. MCDERMOTT is said to have walked 30 miles in 5 hours and 30 minutes, and Jos. E. Robb 25 miles in 4 hours and 45 minutes on the Mill Dam road, Boston, Oct. 18th. On the same day W. Lynde beat J. Busby and another in a ten mile walk on Shawmut avenue, same city. The course is believed to have been short, or the time wrong, in all of the races—certainly in the last.

KENDRICKS AND YOUNG.—The 100 yards race between these men came off at Paterson, N. J., on the 10th inst., the former winning by three feet. They are to run again on Oct. 31st, 120 yards, Kendricks staking $500 to $300.

A ONE HUNDRED YARDS RACE, in heats, for $30, came off at Hamilton Park, N. H., on Oct. 17th, between Young Lovell, of that place, and "Honest Abe," of Norwich, the former winning; time, 14¼, 13 and 12¾ seconds.

A RACE took place between J. Butterfield and Hen Calhoun for $200 a side, 440 yds., at Watertown, N. Y., on the 18th inst, which the latter won by about 10 ft. in 55 sec.

ROBERT DUNNING, the well known quoitist and former proprietor of the Astor Place Quoit Grounds, has associciated himself with Fred. Bellows, Jr., and they have established a saloon and cigar emporium at No. 2 Amity street, a couple of doors from Broadway.

AQUATICS.

THE DOUBLE SCULL CHAMPIONSHIP.

THE MATCH FALLS THROUGH.

As intimated in last week's paper, the match recently made between Wm. Scharry and John Ickeel against Henry Coulter and George Jackson (or Brown), to row five miles for $500 a side and the championship, over the Upper Monongahela course, has ended definitely to the regret of those interested in aquatic sporting, who had reason to look forward to a fine contest, which would bring to an appropriate close a brilliant season of rowing. The reason assigned by Coulter for declining to go on with it is that he had received no reply to several telegraphic dispatches sent to points where it was supposed they would reach Jackson, and his inability to secure any other suitable oarsman to take the latter's seat in the boat. This is all very well, but it will not be considered a valid excuse by the majority of our readers, for he had ample time to have learned precisely where he stood between the broaching of the subject and drawing up of articles of agreement, and he has pursued a very foolish course, which makes him look ridiculous in the eyes of the public, besides treating his opponents in a manner in which he would dislike very much to be handled himself. We have received the following communication from Messrs. Scharry and Ickeel, who are justly indignant at the turn affairs have taken:—

BOSTON, Oct. 20th, 1870.

FRANK QUEEN.—DEAR SIR.—By your journal of the 19th inst.,

the Professors of Brown University, at Providence, R. I., the Professors won by 21 runs. The Harvards monopolized the Bostons on the 18th; score, 32 to 31..... The Eurekas monopolized the Resolutes on the 18th, by a tally of 18 to 16..... Picked nines from Troy and West Troy (rival contests) contested the latter's grounds on the 18th, the former winning by 31 to 25..... The Old Reliables could not be rallied upon to beat the Semi-Professionals in a game played at Lawrence, Kansas, on the 14th, the score being 32 to 15 in the latter's favor. The Eagles of that city, were too many for the Rock Valleys, of Clinton, on the same day, the figures being 61 to 27..... The Riversides, of San Francisco, were defeated by the Oakland Academy nine at Oakland, Cal., on the 15th instant; score, 21 to 16..... Two Professional nines, named respectively the Mutual and the Monterey Nine, played a game in Brooklyn on the 21st inst., the score being 32 to 23..... The Cincinnati Live Oaks won their final game from the Metropolitans last week, 25 to 16..... The Athletics, of Cincinnati, overcame the Mutuals, Ohio last week, 32 to 21..... The Mildred (O.) Club beat that of Newtown, on the 19th, 21 to 17..... On the 17th, the Resorption, of Philadelphia, beat the Monkey Doras, of Lonsdale, Pa., 37 to 16..... The Mechanics were obliged to say a go to the Nationals at Toledo, O., on the 18th; score, 46 to 34.

Byrne—Radcliff, of the Atlantic Club, desires that a contradiction should be made of the statement of the Cincinnati Gazette of Oct. 17, that he had entered into an engagement with the Red Stockings for the season of 1871. He most positively states that he has received no proposition from the Cincinnati Club, nor has he made any to them.

On Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 26, the home and home game between the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, and the Red Stockings, of Cincinnati, will be played on the ground at 117th street and Columbia avenue, Philadelphia. The Atlantics, on this occasion, will present their full strength, including Zettlein as pitcher.

On Sunday, Oct. 23d, the Chicagos started on a tour to St. Louis, playing in that city on Monday with the Unions and on Tuesday with the Empires. On their return they will play the Libertys, of Springfield, on Wednesday, and the Bloomingtons, of Bloomington, on Thursday, arriving home on the following day.

The Red Stockings received $1,580 gate money in the last White Stocking game.

The Chicago Journal says:—

Information was received yesterday that the New York Mutuals would be in this city on the Chicagos on Monday, the 31st of October. From the nature of the circumstances the game will be the cause of more interest than any game that has been played this season. It will not only settle the question of championship, but, in case the Chicagos are victorious, it will place their professionally above all other base ball organizations in the land. It will not be an exhibition game, as some papers have announced, but a bona fide game for the championship. Rain is the fervor of the dispatch received from the Mutuals, and such is the view of the case taken by the Garrys.

Base Ball in New Orleans.—The Lone Star, Jr., and Mutuals played a fine game on Oct. 16th, with the appended result:—

Innings.	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Lone Star, Jr.	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1
Mutual	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	1

Umpire—Sheppard, Esq., Shoo Fly Club. Time of game—1 hour and 15 minutes.

The following is the score of a closely contested game of ball played on the 16th, between the Quickstep and Pelican clubs, resulting in favor of the former. Dead ball used. Pitching excellent, but one base being given during the game by Mr. Ford and none by Mr. D. Harrison:—

Innings.	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Quickstep	0	1	3	1	1	1	1	0	1	9
Pelicans	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0

The Southern Championship.—Some three thousand persons gathered at the base ball park, New Orleans, on the 16th inst., when the second game of the series between the Lone Star and R. E. Lee clubs, for the championship of the South, was played. Before the game commenced it looked very gloomy for the Stars, they being short of their catcher and first baseman, both of whom were on the sick list, and everybody present had decided that the Lees would surely win the championship; but it happened to be the Stars' day, and they came off victorious by the appended score by innings:—

	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
R. E. Lee	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1
Lone Star	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1

Time of game—3 hours. Umpire—J. J. Winn, of the Southern B. B. Club.

Princeton College Game.—On Oct. 18th, the Princeton College nine played the Neptune, of Easton, the former winning by 66 to 7. On Tuesday, the 18th, the Rose Hill College Club, of Fordham, New York, visited Princeton, and the College boys of the latter place indulged them in a game with the following result:—

Innings.	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th

Sad Accident.—During a game between the Aquilla Club, of Westfield, and a nine composed of bankers' and brokers' clerks, at Elizabeth, N. J., on the 15th inst., an outsider was striking at a ball when he accidentally let go his hold, the bat striking Edward Cary, of this city, on the temple, cutting it severely, and forcing the eye from its socket. He at once fell, with a cry of pain, when W. M. Oliver, with much skill and presence of mind, slipped the eye into its place. The injured young man was then conveyed to a drug store, and the services of Dr. Oakley called in, by whom the eye was dressed, and then he was conveyed to the residence of his father, Rev. Mr. Cary, of Grace church. The players all sympathised deeply with him, the game being at once stopped, and the contemplated festivities abandoned.

The Amateur Championship.—Star vs. Harvard.—Mr. Mort. Rogers, President of the Massachusetts Association of Base Ball Players, was in town on the 24th, the object of his visit being partly to make arrangements for the return game between the Harvard Club, of Cambridge, and the Star Club, of Brooklyn, for the Amateur championship. He succeeded in his object, and the Stars are to take their departure for Boston on Saturday, 29th inst., the game being fixed for decision on Jarvis Field, Cambridge, on Monday afternoon, 31st. Deep interest is manifested in this meeting between the two foremost amateur organizations in the country, and 'tis probable that among the crowd which will assemble on the day there will be numerous ball tossers and lovers of the game from this and other sections.

The Pennsylvania Association.—A meeting of the above association was held at Al. Beach's, Philadelphia, on the 19th inst., at which the following officers were chosen for the twelvemonth ensuing:—President—J. R. Chandler, of Mount Vernon B. B. C. First Vice President—A. C. W. Halbach, of West Philadelphia B. B. C. Second Vice President—W. Todd, of Active B. B. C. Corresponding Secretary—W. B. Blair, of Aglia B. B. C. Recording Secretary—W. U. Moyer, Jr., National B. B. C. Treasurer—C. C. Hughes, Expert B. B. C. The meeting adjourned to meet on Monday evening, October 24th, at No. 6 South Eighth street.

Massachusetts Ball Players in Convention.—The second annual meeting of the Massachusetts Association of Base Ball Players will be held at Haynes' Hotel, Main street, Springfield, on Tuesday, Nov. 8th, commencing at 1 o'clock P. M., and, as business of great importance will be brought up, it is desirable that there be a full attendance. It is necessary that delegates should bring their credentials bearing the signatures of the President and Secretary of the clubs they represent.

The Reason Why.—A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette thus accounts for the defeat of the Red Stockings in Chicago recently:—

The umpire was against us, the weather was against us, the crowd was against us, the heavens were against us, the ground was against us, the pestilential air of the Chicago river was against us, the Chicago nine was against us, and last, but not least, the score was against us.

The Receipts at the Union Base Ball Grounds, Brooklyn, during the month of September were $7,441.

THE TRIGGER.

A PROMINENT PIGEON POP.

THE WESTERN CHAMPIONSHIP.

The trigger sports of Louisville, Ky., and the surrounding district had a grand time on the 13th inst. at a pigeon shooting tournament on the Greenland Race Course, at which there was a large attendance. The more attractive events were the matches between Capt. A. Bogardus, the champion of Illinois, and Lieut. David Needy, of Louisville, for the championship of the west. The weather was fine and the ground selected excellent for shooting. Previous to the grand matches of the day, some preliminary matches were shot, one at 20 single birds, between Henry Howard and James McDermott, for $100 a side, 26 yards rise and 80 yards boundary, which was won by the latter killing 17 birds to his opponent's 16.

Another match was for a fine silver pitcher, 5 single birds, 21 yards rise, 80 yards boundary; Needy and Bogardus, who entered, being handicapped at 26 yards. For this the following parties entered:—W. McDermott, James McDermott, H. Howard, J. W. Hoskins, N. Doxey, D. Howard, W. Shank, D. Needy, A. Bogardus and E. Lindenberger. In this match W. McDermott, J. W. Hoskins and Bogardus tied, each killing all their birds, and they had to shoot off at 5 birds each, the distance being increased 5 yards. Hoskins killed five birds to his opponent's 4 each, and was declared winner of the pitcher.

The grand matches were next in order. The first was at 25 single birds, 28 yards rise and 80 yards fall. G. D. Lawrence and W. S. Hunter were chosen judges, and Mr. Taylor, of the Lexington Shooting Club, selected as referee. Lieut. Needy was the favorite, while odds were offered that each bird would be killed. This match resulted in Needy killing 18 birds and Bogardus 16, and Needy was declared the winner. The shooting on both sides was excellent, nearly all the birds counted as missed being hit, but falling outside of the bounds.

The second match at 20 double birds, same rise and fall as the other, was shot, the same judges and referee being selected, and resulted as follows:—Needy, 31 out of 40; Bogardus, 34 out of 40.

This left one match for Kentucky and one for Illinois, and Lieut. Needy proposed to shoot off with Bogardus for both stakes and games, but the latter declined, being well satisfied that he had his hands full in a match with Lieut. Needy. The shooting was very fine throughout, as nearly all the birds were hit, but fell out of the bounds. This shooting, says the Louisville Sun, excels the great matches between Blanton, Duncan and King, which attracted such great attention a few years since, as they shot at only 21 yards rise and 100 yards boundary. Had this been the case in these matches, scarcely a bird would have been put down as missed. There are prospects of other exciting matches pretty soon.

A Pigeon Shoot for $400, 100 birds each, took place at Freemansville, O., on the afternoon of the 12th inst., between Louis Wachenheimer and Alph Carter, in the presence of a large and interested assembly, who speculated lively on the result, Carter being the favorite. Excellent skill was displayed by each marksman, and the fortunes of both varied sufficiently to alternately heighten and darken the hopes of all concerned. The contest grew very close as it neared the end, but a loss by Wachenheimer of the fifth bird before the last, as well as the last two, decided the contest, making Carter the winner by three birds. The score:—

Tournament of the Massachusetts Shooting Club.—This eastern club of trigger experts assembled on the grounds of B. F. Russell, at Arlington, Mass., on the afternoon of the 19th inst., for a shoot at pigeons, 12 birds each, 21 yards rise, 80 boundary, under the president's, Geo. E. Kendall, directions, with Captain T. P. Pierce as judge, which resulted as per the appended figures:—

A Snake Bag Fight for a century a side took place at a pit in Brooklyn on the night of Oct. 19th, between a black red, 5lb. 6oz., owned by H. E. Merton, and a blue breasted cock, 5lbs. 12oz., bred by "Billy B.," of Westchester. The fight was a desperate one, occupying forty-six minutes, when both cocks were so severely cut and exhausted that they could not continue the fierce conflict, and a draw was declared.

A Quoiting Tourney, 21 points up, at 18 and 21 yards, is to take place on Tuesday, Oct. 25th, at the grounds corner of Hudson and York streets, Jersey City, for prizes of $300 and $150.

THE RING.

MATCH MADE IN PHILADELPHIA.

McLEAN vs. MURRAY.

The recent mill at Red Bank, N. J., between Murray and Donovan, though brought to so abrupt a termination, has developed into a match of greater interest to the general public and one which, if carried to a satisfactory finish, will cause matters pugilistic to look up in the east, where they have been very quiet for a long time. The principals to this fresh engagement are that well known and scienced boxer, Billy McLean, and James Murray, who is accredited with having operated so skilfully upon the caput of Jeremiah during the brief exchange of sentiments upon the sacred sandy soil of Jersey, above alluded to. So elated were his friends with the result of that scrap, so far as it had progressed at the period of interruption and so favorable an impression had his style of offence and defence made upon them that they were ready to "plant" for him in opposition to anybody of his weight and inches almost, and when a match was proposed with Billy McLean, who now keeps a drum in West Philadelphia, an agreement was quickly arrived at and money posted for a go. Those who have seen Murray perform think very well of his abilities, and our readers are familiar with Mac's qualities. The latter has been wielding the bat and pounding the bases for the glory of the West Philadelphia Base Ball Club during the season now closing and has thereby kept his muscle in shape and his health excellent, so that he, as well as his opponent, will enter upon training upon a good physical foundation. We present the articles below:—

Articles of Agreement entered into this, the 23d day of Oct., 1870, between Jas. Murray and James Murray, both of Philadelphia, for a fair, stand-up fight, according to the New Rules of the English Prize Ring, for the sum of five hundred dollars a side, open to one thousand dollars a side. The money all duly deposited in the hands of James Colbert, who is chosen final stakeholder. The said fight to take place on Tuesday, Dec. 6th, 1870. The second deposit, of $100 a piece, to be put up at the house of Wm. McLean, Lancaster avenue and 44th street, on Monday, 31st of Oct., 1870; the third, of $100 a side, to be put up at the house of Mr. Greenhalgh, Rose Hotel, corner of Market and 43d street, on Monday, November 7th, 1870; the fourth, of $100 a side, to be put up at the house of Denny Higgins, 13 Westminster avenue, Hestonville, on Monday, Nov. 21st, 1870; the 5th and last, of $150 a side, to be put up at the house of James Colbert, 236 Arch street, on Thursday, Dec. 1st, 1870; all deposits to be made between the hours of 8 and 10 P. M., or either man failing to make good his deposit shall forfeit the money down. The men to fight at catch weight, and the place of fighting to be over fifty and not over one hundred and fifty miles from Philadelphia; the men to be in the ring between the hours of 7 and 11 A. M., or, either failing, shall forfeit the stakes. The money not to be given up until fairly won or lost by a fight. James Colbert is chosen referee by mutual consent. In case of inclemency of weather, said referee is authorized to name another place and time of fighting, if possible, at the same week. The expenses of the ropes and stakes to be paid for by each person, share and share alike.

Witnesses—
Jerry Donovan,
James Elliott.

Scrapping Match on Jersey Soil.—Jim Murray and Jerry Donovan, of the Quaker City, sometime since made a match to test their powers in a game of chop, job and go-as-you-please, for $200 a side, on the soil of the Keystone State. October 20th was the day agreed upon for the mill, and at an early hour the steamtug Molyneaux (a very appropriate name for the occasion, by the way) left the Pine street wharf, towing a tug, on board of which were the principals and about one hundred spectators. The tug steamed down the Delaware to the mouth of the Schuylkill and up the latter stream to Pearces Ferry, in the neighborhood of which it was the intention to bring matters to a focus. Unfortunately for these plans, however, the police had obtained intelligence of the affair and were in hot pursuit on board a steamtug, under command of Sergeant Tappan, arriving at the scene chosen for the fight before the ring had been formed. Foiled in this attempt the Molyneaux proceeded down the Delaware as far as Red Bank, N. J., were a debarkation was had and preparations made to commence work. The stakes were quickly planted, the ropes rove, officials selected and the principals at it. The first round resulted in the discomfiture of Donovan, likewise the second. Twice in succession Murray sent his antagonist to his devotions. Donovan was badly hammered in those two rounds, and Murray was still without a scratch or bruise. At this juncture the adherents of Donovan, bent upon their champion being victorious by fair play or foul, made a grand assault upon the Murray gang. Blackjacks were drawn and blood freely flowed, several of Murray's friends being badly cut about the head. Just as the row was fairly under way the tug arrived and the party of police effected a landing. The hostilities were at once suspended, but upon the officers intimating their intention to take the ringleaders into custody they were informed that they were beyond the jurisdiction of Philadelphia, which had the effect of causing them to alter their minds, and at 10.30 the officers started for the city. Murray, doubtless fearful of violence at the hands of Donovan's friends, accepted a polite invitation to return to the city on the Douglas, in which course he was followed by John Brogan, William Hogan, Dennis Hickey, Thomas Jones, Thomas Maguire and John Smith. As soon as the tug was within the jurisdiction of the city they were taken into custody, and on arriving at the city they were marched up to the Central station. At 2 o'clock the prisoners were arraigned before Alderman Kerr for a hearing, but having committed no offence in Pennsylvania, they were discharged.

The Lewis Campbell Match.—There is a probability that the match made a few weeks ago between David Lewis and Bryan Campbell, to fight within two hundred miles of Mahoney City, Pa., on Dec. 19th, for $1,000 a side, will come to naught. In our issue of last week we stated that we could not accept the position of final stakeholder, with which proviso the articles were drawn up, and this of course rendered the agreement null and void as it then stood. On the 20th inst., the date fixed upon for staking the second deposit, of $400 a side, we received that sum by express from Daniel Carpenter, on behalf of Lewis, accompanied by a letter, wherein he desired to know if we would consent to hold the stakes until the full amount was posted, and then transfer them to the gentleman chosen final stakeholder hereafter, to which we of course offer no objection. On the day following a communication came to hand from Campbell, who stated that his backers had been unable to induce the Lewisites to agree to any terms for the vacant position, they refusing to accept responsible men named by the Challenger, or to provide a suitable incumbent themselves; consequently, he did not consider it advisable to forward any more money until some satisfactory arrangement was made, of which there then appeared little probability. Thus the case stands at present. Of course the articles are not binding under the circumstances, a forfeit cannot be claimed, and unless some one is agreed upon to fill the office of final stakeholder, the match falls through.

Punch Morris in Limbo.—This light weight boxer was tried for vagrancy at St. Louis on the 11th inst., and fined $500 and allowed six hours to make himself scarce in "them parts." He neglected to vamose, however, and two days afterward was pulled again. Promising not to stand upon the order of going but to decamp for other fields and pastures instanter, he was allowed to take himself off. Shortly after, an accident occurred on the T. W. and W. Railroad, in which Punch was erroneously reported killed, his name being confounded with a man named Fitzmaurice, and he took advantage of this mistake to once more tread the familiar bricks of his old stamping ground. He was quickly recognized, and a member of the locust brigade, with no fear of ghosts or hobgoblins before his eyes, seized upon him and on the 21st he was dumped into the workhouse for six months.

Allen and Gallagher.—The latest intelligence from the head-quarters of the above pugilists, matched to fight on Nov. 1st, state that Gallagher was very ill at his training quarters on the 22d, and it was thought he would not be able to mill. This won't surprise many, as from the character of the match it has been generally regarded as gotten up solely with a view to enlivening matters fistic in that section and raking in a few dollars, without risking much, if anything, more than a few "punches in the 'ead."

A Draw.—In the interrupted fight of the 20th between Jerry Donnovan and James Murray, at Red Bank, N. J., a draw was subsequently agreed upon.

We have a letter for James Cusick.

CRICKET.

NEGRO MINSTRELS AS CRICKETERS.

Chas. B. Hicks, a member of the American Slave Troupe, at present traveling in England, informs us that the members thereof have organized a base ball and cricket club, but can only play the former between themselves. They have played against some of the amateur clubs of Ireland, frequently proving victorious. On Oct. 1st they played against the St. George Club at Bradford Park, and were beaten by a count of 97 to 85. On the 4th they encountered the Stanley Conservative Club on the same grounds, and were again unfortunate, scoring 98 in two innings to 99 of the Stanley Club in their first innings and 23 in the second, with ten wickets to fall. The bowling of Richard, for the Americans, was fatal, five wickets being taken by him for fifteen runs and two cyphers. The double figures made by the Stanleys were J. Crook, 10; G. Hilton, 13; J. Holden, 19, and Joseph F. Ward, 3, with 20, not out, in the second innings. On the side of the troupe, Lott scored 12, and Hague 26, by a capital display of well judged batting.

At Fredericton, N. B., a close match of one innings took place on the Barrack grounds on the 15th inst., between the St. George and University clubs, the former winning by 18 runs. The score at the close stood—St. George, 82; University, 64.

Young Quebec vs. Victoria.—These cricket clubs, of Quebec, C. E., played a match on the 18th inst., on the plains of Abraham, which the youngsters won by 83 runs, the grand totals being 111 against 28.

A Handsome Prize for Snow Shoers.—There is every prospect that the approaching season among the snow-shoe racers of Canada will be prolific of sport. As an incentive to rivalry among the athletes of the dominion, where this constitutes the principal sport indulged in during the winter season, Messrs. Cohen and Lopez, tobacconists, of St. James and Place d'Armes, Montreal, are now having manufactured in Vienna, it is said, a meerschaum pipe of elegant design. The pipe will be a good sized one, and on the front of the bowl will be a pair of snow shoes and the inscription "Montreal 1871." On each side will be a beaver and maple leaf. It will be richly mounted, and have a shield for the winner's name. This splendid piece of work will cost upwards of $100.

Mr. Jordan, of Oldtown, Me., has disposed of his gelding, American Boy, to parties in New York for $8,000. He is one of the fleetest trotters ever owned in Maine, having made a mile in 2:27, the last half of which was done in 1:10, in public.

Lady Petry Sold.—Mr. John Franklin, of New Orleans, during his recent visit to this city, sold his promising three year old filly, Lady Petry, who won both at Saratoga and Jerome Park, to Mr. Henchman, of Paterson, N. J., for $800.

Polly Perkins and Sprig Tail Kit trotted a mile for $25 a side, at Southgate, Eng., on the 7th inst., the former winning by two yards, after a most exciting race, in 3:50.

John Jackson and T. Howson, two of the best nurr and spell players in England, played a match on the Doncaster Town Moor, Oct. 24, for £100, thirty rises each, pot nurrs not exceeding half an ounce in weight. Jackson, who was the favorite at odds of 6 to 4, won by nine scores, the totals being 246 to 237. Between three and four thousand spectators were present.

George Dunning, the veteran disc caster, will be the recipient of a benefit at Tuckley's Good Intent Grounds, 240 West 40th street, on Oct. 26th, when a quoiting tournament for a fine gold seal ring will take place, the competitors embracing some of the finest players of this city and neighborhood.

The Crystal Volunteers are to hold their annual invitation ball on Tuesday evening, Nov. 1st, at Glean Hall, 54th street.

CHINESE EUCHRE.

BY TRUTHFUL JAMES.

Which I wish to remark—
And my language is plain—
That for ways that are dark
And for tricks that are vain,
The heathen Chinee is peculiar—
Which the same I would rise to explain.

Ah Sin was his name,
And I shall not deny,
In regard to the same,
What that name might imply.
But his smile it was pensive and child-like,
As I frequent remark to Bill Nye.

It was August the third,
And quite early was the skies,
Which it might be interred
That Ah Sin was likewise;
Yet he played that day upon William
And me in a way I despise.

Which we had a small game,
And Ah Sin took a hand,
It was Euchre. The same
He did not understand,
But he smiled, as he sat by the table,
With the smile that was child-like and bland.

Yet the cards they were stocked
In a way that I grieve,
And my feelings were shocked
At the state of Nye's sleeve,
Which was stuffed full of aces and bowers,
And the same with intent to deceive.

For I had hands that were played
By that heathen Chinee,
And the points that he made
Were quite fearful to see—
Till at last he put down a right bower,
Which the same Nye had dealt unto me.

Then I looked up at Nye,
And he gazed upon me;
And he rose with a sigh,
And said—"Can this be?
We are ruined by Chinese cheap labor"—
And he went for that heathen Chinee.

In the scene that ensued
I did not take a hand,
But the floor it was strewed,
Like the leaves on the strand,
With the cards that Ah Sin had been hiding,
In the game "he did not understand."

In his sleeves, which were long,
He had twenty-four packs—
Which was coming it strong,
Yet I state but the facts;
And we found on his nails, which were taper,
What is frequent in tapers—that's wax.

Which is why I remark,
And my language is plain,
That for ways that are dark,
And for tricks that are vain,
The Heathen Chinee is peculiar—
Which the same I am free to maintain.

"BLUFF'S GAME OF POKER."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

While in camp on the north fork of the Concho, the river raised to such an extent that it was impossible for us to ford it for several days. So the boys passed the time hunting, playing poker and story telling. In about two days all the loose change had passed to and fro in the pockets of two or three sharpers and the game went below par. One evening, after supper, Bill Sharp and his friends (Diamond and Flint) put up a job for Billy Bluff, who was the only one in the party outside of the "Diamond Ring" that had any money. After several inducements had been held out to Billy, Sharp remarked:—

"I don't see, Billy, why you won't play just for a small antie till bed time—I saw you playing seven-up all day."

"Yes," replied Billy, "I can play seven-up with old sledge himself, even if he was to come on all fours; but no poker for me; I got all the poker I wanted on the Red River about a year ago."

"How was that?" exclaimed one.

"Let's have it, Billy," muttered Sharp; for Billy could tell a good story when he felt like it.

"Well," said Billy, in his dry way, "set down and I'll tell you all about it."

So all hands drew near the camp fire to hear Billy relate his poker story. Billy had by this time fixed his mouth with an ounce of navy.

"Now," said Billy, "it was about a year ago that myself and Big Harry made up our minds to go to New Orleans and see the sights; we had had a big streak of luck all the way up the Red River and back in the country as far as Clarksville. In fact, we had more money than we knew what to do with, so off we started for the Crescent City; we took passage on the steamer Emma, and a bully boat was she. When we arrived at Shreveport we ascertained from the captain that the boat would lay over for a few hours, and up town we started to have a game of billiards. I hadn't played a game in over a year and was anxious to see how much I had improved. After a while we found a saloon with three or four tables, and as no one was playing, we took a drink and started the game. We had not been playing but a short time when a little incident happened which I thought at the time a good joke.

"Two fellows came into the saloon; they looked to me like a pair of bull wackers, about half tight, and to convince me in my opinion they took up a couple of high chairs for the use of spectators of the game, and seating themselves up to a carom table, called the proprietor and ordered 'dinners for two.'

"Harry and myself had a hearty laugh at this; the boss himself could not refrain from smiling, and informed them that he did not keep a restaurant there, 'only got up and started off, saying something about a h—of an eating house as they closed the door.

"Having finished our game we sauntered down to the boat, where, to our surprise, we found the bull wackers had taken passage for New Orleans. Shortly after the boat left the levee Harry and I started for the bar, where we found our friends, the wackers, enjoying themselves; they recognized us, and introduced themselves to us once. Wacker I thought that was the poorest eating house he had ever seen; we all had a few drinks, and retired to the saloon, where we started a game of seven up, just to pass the time away. Harry and myself were partners against the wackers, and were just playing all around them, when Wacker I remarked, 'I would like to have this hand in a game of poker.'

"'Just my hand; let's make it poker.'

"'Agreed!' shouted the wacker.

"Now Harry and wacker 2 drew out of the game.

"'Draw poker,' says wacker.

"'All right, bet your hand.' He took up his hand, looked it over, and bet five dollars.

"'I see you and go ten better.'

"He looked at me very sharp, saying, 'I'll see your ten—how many cards do you want?' for it was his deal.

"'Two,' was my quick reply.

"'Just my hand,' returned the wacker, 'I have the best three cards in the pack.'

"'If you think so, let's discard two and bet.'

"To which he consented and bet twenty dollars. I saw his XX, and went fifty better, which he soon raised to five hundred; I raised it back; he would not call me, but still raised it. I showed my hand to Harry, and bet about all his money. The pot was now about five thousand dollars, and quite a crowd had assembled around the table.

"'Friend,' said the wacker, 'I am a stranger here; I would like to have a judge in this game before we call the hands.'

"'All right; here is the steward of the boat; I think he understands the game.'

"'Certainly gentlemen,' was the modest reply of the steward.

"'Well, I'll call you,' muttered the wacker. 'What have you got?'

"'Three aces,' shouted I, at the same time reaching for the pot.

"'Steady, partner,' was the cool remark of the wacker, as he drew a pistol from his breast, and layed down a 'small flush.' Which beats three of a kind,' quietly decided the steward.

"This settled it, for the steward was my own choice for referee. Harry and I got off at the next landing, and took the first boat up the river. I promised Harry never to play poker again. He said if I had called my three aces a full hand we might have gone to New Orleans, and had cause to REJOICE."

FORT CONCHO, Sept., 1870.

[Billy seems to have been counted out without any warrant, the "small flush," as it was called, held by the wacker, being no flush at all. Billy's three aces formed the winning hand.—ED.]

THE ROMANCE OF A MINSTREL.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY JOHNNY ENRIGHT.

Upon the fifteenth day of May, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, I embarked upon the ill fated steamship City of Boston, bound for Liverpool. One calm and beautifully moonlit evening, an assemblage of passengers were comfortably situated on deck, when, to dispel the monotony of the moment, the future conversation was unanimously decided to be that of "spinning yarns." So enjoying the comfort of half a traveling blanket with my old pugilistic friend, Bob Brettle, I was very anxious that the first yarn should commence. While some were puzzling their brains for a story, others were awaiting to produce better ones. Finally, a returned California miner volunteered to furnish the first, which was composed of fights with grizzlies, bowie knives, shooting irons, &c. Others revealed great ghost stories and shipwrecks, but the most interesting and truly romantic tale was the following, spoken by one of the crew as an American government detective:—"Last night, after promenading the deck in a late hour, I was about to retire to my berth, when my eyes were suddenly attracted by the appearance of two beautiful faces, a woman and a child. There was a something remarkably mournful depicted upon the face of the young woman, who was deeply arrayed in mourning. Being rather inquisitive, and fond of analyzing strange characters, I entered into conversation with her, and obtained the following information, which I shall relate in her own words:—

"My parental home is in Bradford, Yorkshire county, England, where I was born and nursed from childhood. My father was a distinguished barrister and exceedingly wealthy, having two other children besides myself, a brother and sister, the former at present engaged in H. M. service as a naval officer. My sister married an estated gentleman from Scotland, and, living in the dwelling in some part of that country. After my brother's departure and sister's marriage, I became the idol of both father and mother, who placed me in Tuscar Hill Convent, under the kind supervision of talented and educated matrons. After the lapse of nearly a year I returned home for a short vacation, and while riding through the streets in the coach I was surprised to see a grand array of large sheet-posters, announcing the arrival of the 'Great Christy Minstrels.' Being a lover of all amusements, I induced my father to conduct me to the Princess Theatre to see the minstrels. The curtain soon went up, to the delight of the audience. The gentleman that played upon the tambourine end threw several loving glances at me, which I happily returned, for, by his beautiful singing and inimitable remarks, he soon won my heart. One summer's morning, while walking through the park, I beheld a gentlemanly looking young man, who, upon seeing me, started as if touched, finishing with a loving smile, displaying a set of pearl-like teeth. It was love at first sight, and after exchanging several smiles I scampered off for home, my heart all aglow and my excited mind puzzling itself as to who the gentleman could be. Next evening, whilst the family were about going to tea, a knock was heard at the door and a letter was handed to the housemaid, who, as usual, deposited it upon the library table. Immediately after supper I made all haste for the library, and there found a small envelope, addressed to me in the following manner:—

MISS GERTRUDE STAUNTON,
No. 22 Staunton Villa.

"Hastily opening the same, I perceived in a few lines a declaration of love, accompanied with an original sonnet and signed

Yours devotedly, HARRY LALLOUETTE,
Of Christy's Minstrels.

"My father, by some means, obtained information of my corresponding with Mr. Lallouette, and immediately despatched me back to the convent, at which place I remained but a short time, as my true hearted Harry planned an elopement, and upon the following day we left Bradford by the evening mail train for Liverpool, at which place we were married. Hearing of our escape and marriage, my father at once disinherited me. Shortly afterwards we sailed for America, and upon our arrival moved down into the interior of the state, where Harry purchased a small piece of land, and was prospering fairly, but not being used to farm life he removed to New York, and secured an engagement with B——t's Minstrels. But upon the breaking out of the rebellion Harry entered the United States army, and by his excellent qualities obtained the commission of lieutenant. I corresponded with him regularly, but for some time did not receive an answer. Sorrowful tidings soon reached my ears that grim death hath seized him for its own; for at the great battle of Gettysburg my dear Harry, my only hope through life, received his final call. He had made his last exit from the stage of life. After receiving the sad news I wrote to my friends in England, who informed my parents of my broken-hearted situation. The result was that, in a short time afterwards, I received an affectionate letter from my father (accompanied by a bank order for fifty pounds), forgiving me for all my past life, and requesting me to return to comfort their remaining old days. Bursting into tears, she exclaimed:—

And with sorrow, and repentance, true,
Father, I, convinced, come to you.

"This concludes the romance of Harry Lallouette's life, composed of love, matrimony and death."

MR. T. W. ROBERTSON'S NEW COMEDY OF "BIRTH."

This comedy has evidently been written to show the strongly marked contrasts which conventional distinctions have produced in society, and though philosophers are apt to sneer, yet when brought into actual contact with them, they are very apt to yield them marked deference. In the present piece the representative of an ancient noble family, whose title he jealously guards, because there is little else for him to care for, his estates having passed from him bit by bit, through poverty, is opposed to one of the aristocracy of labor who has proved successful in trade, and who has bought the land the [illegible] soil was compelled to part with from time to time. Although at first diametrically opposed to each other, the author has adroitly contrived a union between these two representative men, and the working out of this problem constitutes the plot, of which the following is an outline:—

The first act introduces us to the premises of the great manufacturer, Paul Hewitt, which have sprung up close to the domain of the Earl of Ragleclyffe, who is the victim equally of pride and poverty. A dependent of the Earl, called the "Duke," a half-witted old fellow, who has a great regard for his titled master's name, and a corresponding hatred of the possessor of the factory, has quarrelled with some of the workmen, when a friend of Paul, one Jack Randall, who has been expected, suddenly arrives and rescues the Duke from some meditated rough usage. Although the new comer has little to do with the real story, his is the character which will, we anticipate, prove most popular with the audience, inasmuch as it has been written specially for Mr. Sothern. He is one of those careless, merry wights, abounding in modern comedies, who "hail fellow, well met," with either peer or peasant, who contrives to be equally at home in the mansion or the cottage. Jack settles the dispute in the present instance by the potent agency of beer, remarking sententiously, "One glass of 'bitter' makes the whole world kin." The arrival of Paul to greet his guest and quondam school fellow leads to a discussion between them relative to the land of the castle and the thriving manufacturer, which a little political economy is disposed of, and the family feud between the two narrated. As the peer grew more needy, his neighbor admitted he waxed richer, and this caused ill feeling to be engendered, so that when the former was offered the command of the local volunteers, who were sent out from the works, he declined because their employer was their captain. Sarah, the sister of Paul, joins in the discussion, and it transpires that the Earl also has a sister, the Lady Adeliza, known from childhood and secretly beloved by her wealthy neighbor. Jack forms the determination that the feud shall be healed by an intermarriage, and announces this to Paul and Sarah, who both scout the idea, knowing how contemptuously they are regarded by Lord Ragleclyffe on account of their birth. Jack gives an account of his own reverses, and declares his intention of writing for the stage, suddenly forming the design of making the plot of a comedy out of the position of affairs between Paul and the Earl. Absorbed with the idea he goes off with his friend, who has business with his lawyer, and Sarah, in their absence, studies a Peerage, and is deep in the entry relative to the family at the castle when the present representative of the Ragleclyffes is announced, he having come to apologize for the eccentric conduct of "The Duke." A conversation ensues between the two, and at length a reference to the old fashioned gun carried by the Earl leads that lady to show him a new breach loader, which she takes from the wall. In the act of instructing him how sight is taken with the piece, the Earl places his head close to hers as she puts the rifle to her shoulder, and at this interesting juncture Jack Randall suddenly appears on the scene. He recognises in the lord an old school fellow, Cecil Stormont, but had forgotten his family name, and now learns he is the "grim Earl." Paul and his clothes much disarranged, and explains that, as he and Paul were riding, a lady on horseback, whom they met, nearly fell off through her animal swerving at sight of their trap. Paul leaped from the vehicle to assist her, and the mare in the trap having rolled over with Jack down the hill. While this narrative is being proceeded with Paul enters, supporting the fair creature whom he had rescued, and she proves to be the Lady Adeliza. A stiff interview, as far as the Earl is concerned, takes place between him and Paul, and with the ceremonious departure of the titled brother and sister the first act concludes.

The second act shows the possessors of the Castle taking a last look at the interior of the building, which, though their hereditary possession, they have to quit through the advancing strides of poverty, and the manufacturer will shortly become the occupant of the place. As they go out of the banqueting hall into the grounds, Jack and Sarah enter the apartment, and the former, in carrying forward his design of bringing about a marriage between her and the Earl, spouts some stanzas from "Don Juan," referring to the siege of Jahmall, and, taking it for granted that she has never read the poem, pretends that he is recounting the gallant achievements of Lord Ragleclyffe. His Lordship and his sister re-enter the hall, and interrupt Jack in his quotation. The four converse, and a legend of the Castle, in which a White Lady figures, is narrated by Lady Adeliza. Of course this White Lady "walks," and while the party are discussing as to what her ghostly peregrinations bode, Paul is announced. He comes to state that his workpeople desire his entry into the Castle shall be the occasion of rejoicing; and, taking advantage of his presence, Jack contrives to separate the rest of the party from him and Lady Adeliza, and urges Paul to propose to her at once. The wealthy parvenu follows his advice, and just as he has made his avowal the Earl comes into the room and gives vent to his indignation. He, however, subsequently composes his features on the warning, from one of the cottage Jack settles the dispute in the present instance by the potent agency of beer, remarking sententiously, "One glass of 'bitter' makes the whole world kin." He, however, subsequently composes his features on the warning, from one of the cottage [illegible] welcome their master to his new abode, though afterwards, when they have tired to the lawn, where a dinner has been provided for them, he gets his pistol case and resolves to fight Paul, as stung by his insulting expression when in the tête-à-tête between Paul and Lady Adeliza, the latter having called him a "bankrupt, a beggar, and a braggart." The merriment of the volunteers is suddenly stopped by the news that Paul, while soliloquising in the grounds, had been shot. Jack is suspected of the attempted murder, committed the crime, because he was heard to express regret that Lord Ragleclyffe should be compelled to leave the Castle; and as he is borne off in custody on the shoulders of the men, to whom he shouts vigorously "Take care of my body," the act concludes.

In the third and last act, however, suspicion falls upon the Earl, and while he is in a ruinous part of the Castle near the chapel, at night, his old retainer, the Duke, rushes in to acquaint him that the White Lady has been seen, and that this betokened danger. His lordship receives the intelligence with merriment, and explains that he had set a figure, which must have been mistaken for the apparition, in the turret, in order to scare the lads of the village, some of whom had formerly made an entry into the tower and stole two guns. Suddenly the figure of Sarah, enveloped in a white shawl, is perceived to pass through the shadows of the chapel, and she is at first deemed by the Duke and his master the veritable White Lady. She informs the Earl that he is alleged to have attempted the life of her brother, and, as she knew he could not be guilty of cowardly assassination, came to warn him of the danger that menaced him from the infuriated workmen. Touched by the devotion evinced by his fair visitant, the nobleman feels a passion which she had before inspired in him increased; and whilst the pair await anxiously the approach of the guild of those who are to seize the Earl, they observe a female figure attired in white appear on the tower. This supposed spectre proves to be Jack, who, having been taken before a magistrate and liberated, at once sped off to do what he could to shield his titled friend, threatened as he thinks he is at the hands of Paul's workpeople. To terrify the pursuers he adopted the disguise of the castle ghost, and which, as soon as he beheld the Earl and Sarah, he threw off. The crowd now approaches, and Lady Adeliza, rushing to the window, is startled by the outcry the charge brought against her brother, as the would-be assassin was none other than the old Duke, who, being half demented, had shot at Paul, scarce knowing what impelled him to the act. Paul, with his arm in a sling, comes forward to verify this statement, and when he says he must return to tell his sister of his escape. To his astonishment she appears through the doorway of the tower, and the Earl, now her declared lover, sequaints the brother of the mission she undertook to shield him. Jack, winding up the plot, asks for her hand might be bestowed on him. Jack intimates that the only thing wanted to complete the general felicity is that Paul should wed Lady Adelina; and the Earl, on seeing that the manufacturer was nothing loth to adopt the suggestion, shakes hands with him, and the curtain falls on a charming tableau, the moral of the drama being, we presume, that which is prominently referred to in another of Mr. Robertson's most ingenious plays:—

"True hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood."

There are three scenes to the comedy—"The Factory in the Valley," "The Castle on the Heights," and "The Keep in the Depths."

HIGHLAND GAMES.

A RESPONSE TO GLENGARRY'S LETTER.

The communication which was published in our columns recently, over the signature of "Glengarry," taking exceptions to the action of the delegates to the Convention of Caledonians, held in this city during the summer, and ridiculing some of the rules laid down by them for the government of Scottish festivals in the States and Canada, has brought the following letter from a champion on the opposite side, who hauls Glengarry over the coals at a lively rate. Our Caledonian friends will peruse it with pleasure:—

EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—One would imagine that no one would sit down to write upon a subject without some knowledge of it. Such is, however, the case with your correspondent, "Glengarry," whose letter appeared in your issue of the 8th inst., upon the subject of Highland games and the laws relating thereto. Glengarry has a vulgar faith in his own immaculate self, but, as Publicus observed, "Malum est consilium quod mutari non potest," which, taking into account Glengarry's better knowledge of Gaelic than Latin, I will translate, "That counsel's ill that will admit no change."

I was not in the Dominion when the competition took place which has apparently given your correspondent a touch of Donald Dinnie on the brain, being at the time engaged on Glengarry's native heath. The rule he quotes regarding the "Sleidh-dearg" between runners, and of which he complains so bitterly, is simply a copy of the one adopted by the committee of the Inverness Northern meeting, and no other style is practiced either at Inverness, Braemar or any other northern gathering. Some trouble was taken about the "sleidh," and a new law regarding the hammer handle, and to allow, in addition, any style of throwing or any number of turns. This, however, was soon over-ruled, for the looser system not only led to accidents, but one man insisted upon competing with a hammer provided by himself, to which a long, supple handle was attached, which would have given him an advantage over the fair throwers, in a like proportion as one man with a sling would be to another throwing from the hand, or as a running jump would be to standing fair and toeing the mark. The Inverness rule is a good precedent to stand by, and the committee of the northern meeting must be taken as authorities on this class of sport, in the same manner as the Marylebone Club of London decides all laws relating to cricket.

Putting the Stone.—This has also its peculiar laws. Throwing is easily learned, especially with a 16lb. stone, and if Glengarry wishes to be able to put on a yard or so over his present put, let him put himself at once in training under Will Tait, of Castle Douglas, N. B., who will put him into the secret of this putting peculiarity. From Glengarry's extraordinary notions about dancing I am led to believe that one of the wives of Sam Weller must have resided in Scotland. A 70 years of age, boasted that he could dance a Highland Fling or 24 steps on the breadth of a peat sod. This was certainly the only time I ever heard of so given number of steps being mentioned. At Inverness and Braemar I have never seen dancers limited to figures; but perhaps Glengarry can give us his authority for four and twenty.

Coming to Gillie Callum, or the sword dance, upon which your correspondent is also a self-appointed authority, he informs us that this consists of fourteen steps without counting the preliminary evolutions round the swords. Perhaps he takes his notion of the number of steps from the fact that this dance was performed by thirteen persons before King Charles I. at Perth, Scotland, in 1633 (see Logan). The ancient dance was a sort of Pyrrhic or war dance, in which swords were brandished by the performers as if in real fight (see Sir Walter Scott), and was called the Bacnid," and the words of an old sky-dancing song are favorable to the "Sleidh in use at Ness," "I will break your head," was repeated to a flourish of the sword on each compartment. A modern sword dance allows a great latitude to the taste displayed by the performer, and the prize is often obtained, not by the best dancer, but by the most careful one, as was the case at Inverness some two years ago, when the best dancers Scotland could produce competed, but, the day being wet and the platform slippery, they all, with the exception of one, touched their swords more or less. Among the performers were Charles Scott, Norman, McIntyre, McBain, Cameron, MacKenzie, Hepburn and others, whom at that time there were none to equal. The winner of the prize had neither grace nor agility, nor, in fact, any pretensions whatever in comparison to Scott, Norman, Hepburn and others, far enough away from the blades, so as to prevent any possibility of touching, or having his head broken by an unexpected fall.

The long jump I have alluded to is also in accordance with the recognized rule as it now stands, such as was scored by Glengarry exists at Oxford University, but I would have thought such an authority as he puts himself forward to be would not have gone to England for laws to guide him in carrying out Caledonian games. I fear, from the tenor of his letter, he has been sadly beaten in the last competition, and, instead of digesting his gruel quietly, he has allowed it to turn sour on his stomach; hence his ill-natured letter. His knowledge of the game of quoits seems even to be more superficial than those games already quoted. He says not a word about shortening the distance to eighteen yards, when it is well known that the Caledonian game from time immemorial has been twenty-one yards, and he gives the English way of measuring, not the Scottish, and yet he puts himself forward as an authority. When a man places himself so prominently before the public, in endeavoring to back up a grievance by censuring others, he lays himself open to criticism. If he has here of his own for the guidance of sport on this continent, let us have them by all means; but when he gives us those rules of his own making as a copy of what were for the guidance of our forefathers, then I say unless he gives the name of the author and the date of the publication, any one, let him be Glengarry or Windsor, is courting popularity under false pretences. I am your obedient servant,

H. GORDON.

P. S.—I have only recently arrived in this country, and write in the interest of sport and fair play without having any other object whatever in view.

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

"FOR SOMEBODY."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY LOUISE M. E——.

Fold me close to your beating heart, my love,
And hold me there until I lose my breath—
I, weak and panting like a frightened dove,
Wounded to death.

Oh, hold me closer, tighter, closer yet,
For I am thine—my heart, my soul, my life—
I could die here, and never once regret
To leave earth's strife.

I would to heaven I could be wholly thine
And never part with thee, death or life—
No mortal ever gave the love like mine,
Not e'en thy wife.

Press on my waiting lips one thrilling kiss,
The first, the last that thou hast ever given—
Oh! it is joy to live and love like this—
The most—'tis heaven!

There! let me go! We must do so no more;
Our chains are golden, yet they bind us tight;
We reach beyond them and they chafe us sore—
Good by—good night!

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 19th.

MATRIMONIAL INFELICITY AMONG THE JONESES.

A PAIR OF MRS. JONESES—1,000 MILES FOR $1,500.

A lady by the name of Mrs. Ellen Jones arrived in our city yesterday morning from Buffalo, N. Y., in search of her truant husband, Mr. John Jones, who has been in the employ of C. L. Colman here in his saw mill for three years, and who, after having had three promising children born to him by his first wife and deserted them, attuned his wily soul to the harmonies and charms of Mrs. Robinson, who resided in Sparta (a lady divorced from her husband), and married her "on the sly" the 11th of last August, solemnly swearing that he had a divorce from his wife also. And now, really before the honeymoon is over, the first real Mrs. Jones appears on the scene, having been informed of her husband's double dealing, and forthwith Mr. Jones finds himself in the lock-up confronted by Mrs. Jones No. 1. And here occurred a scene long to be remembered. Mrs. Jones stopped at a hotel and sent officer Loomis down to Colman's saw mills to arrest Jones, who unsuspectingly came along, thinking he was wanted as a witness. He was locked up and Mrs. Jones sent for, who was kept from his sight in the little hall-way between the cells. Officer Loomis then unlocked the cell and Mr. Jones came out, and said, "Well, where is it you want me?" Officer Loomis replied, "Here," pointing to Mrs. Jones, and at the same time saying, "Mr. Jones, Mrs. Jones; Mrs. Jones, Mr. Jones." We never saw a sheep killing dog with half such a humiliating look as Jones displayed, who seemed to look about for a crack in the floor to sink through. Neither spoke for a minute or two, when she emphatically informed him, "Oh! it's me?" and then went for him—justly, too—telling him she knew of his marriage and had come out here to hunt him down, and that he must either pay $1,000 or go to state prison. He had not a word to say in defence, but coolly asked if that was all, and told her that he could not raise it. She then told him she never intended to come to him, but had heard he had married again, and she flew to prosecute him, as she had taken care of his children—aged respectively 8, 10 and 12 years—and had labored and suffered, and now, as he proposed to do unlawful acts, he should help support the children.

Jones was formerly a farmer in Fillmore county, Minn., and married the first Mrs. Jones there, who was a daughter of Mr. McLain, of that county, some thirteen years ago. He enlisted in the army and served four years, and became dissipated, which led to their separation.

This morning she again visited him in his cell when he was "old humility" himself, and begged her to name a sum that was within his reach, that he might settle and be saved from the penitentiary. She was inexorable, and he briefly scraped together $1,400 in approved notes and mortgages, and $100 cash. She gave the $1,500 in paper in lieu of $1,000 cash, and both have signed papers to the effect that they are forever to be nothing to each other, and she will start for home this evening.—La Crosse Democrat, Oct. 4th.

A MORMON LOVE TRAGEDY.

A TRUE LOVE'S SACRIFICE.

In spite of the latitude allowed in Mormondom to amatorial or matrimonial numerical conjunctions and indulgences, it appears that the course of true love does not always run smooth, as is made manifest from the following quotation from a late issue of the Utah Gospel:—

"Miss Laura Claire, the beautiful daughter of Professor Ignaz Claire, the astronomer, has, it has been well known for some time, been engaged to Mr. Alfred Vivian, the young writer, author of "Hell and Heaven—Which Will You Have?" "Think and Repent," "Prayers for the Sinners," and other beautiful tracts, which have given him quite a reputation; but, for some reason or other, it has been suspected that there was coldness between them. Still, Miss Claire loved him devotedly, and the preparations for the wedding were going on. In the meanwhile Mr. Joseph Morton, a young gent of this city, had fallen desperately in love with Miss Claire and refused to be denied admittance to the house, although Professor Claire had several times ordered him out. He, when treated thus, declared mysteriously that he knew certain secrets about Miss Claire, and if she did not marry him he would repeat them. He demanded to see her alone. This she finally consented to, and, after a long interview, he departed, stating he would return the next day. To this she smiled and said, "Yes, I shall always be glad to see you." These words were repeated by one of the servants to Mr. Vivian when he came that evening, and he asked his affianced what they meant. She said, "Nothing." After a while he said, "Do you love this Morton?" Miss Claire laughed and said, "Don't be a fool, Alfred." "Then you refuse to answer?" he said. She frowned. "You know I love you," she answered, "and if you ask me any more questions you will be angry." Mr. Vivian left shortly after, appearing much displeased. The next morning Mr. Morton came. The servants noticed that Miss Claire was deadly pale, but she received him quite cordially. "You must have some wine," she said. "Of course," he replied, "with you." He took a glass and drank it. Shortly after he departed, but before he walked one block he fell to the ground and was picked up dead! A post mortem revealed the fact that he had been poisoned. Miss Claire was arrested. She sent for Vivian. "Do you believe me guilty?" she asked. "I have nothing to say," he replied, "I am and have been for a month engaged to be married to a gay lady in this city, and it is not right that I should be seen with you." The young lady uttered a piercing scream. "Alfred," she shrieked, "did it for your sake. I loved you. He could have prevented our marriage. Oh! Alfred, do not desert me! save me!" Mr. Vivian tore himself away and would have quitted the cell, when Miss Claire placed herself with her back against the door. "Look," she said, and before he could prevent it she had drawn a dagger, and, stabbing herself, she fell dying at his feet. "I forgive you, I love you," she murmured, and her eyes closed forever.

DOUBLE SUICIDE.

A YOUNG MAN AND A YOUNG WOMAN DROWN THEMSELVES.

The vicinage of Sorapuru market, Fourth district, experienced an unusual sensation yesterday morning, when a statement was made public that two persons, male and female, had jumped from the wharf into the river and were drowned. The fact was well established, as two or more persons witnessed the voluntary tragedy.

Andrew Ryan, about twenty-two years old, and Jennie Sweeney, seventeen, had together, between four and five o'clock yesterday morning, walked from Sorapuru market, going to the wharf, when Ryan threw himself into the river, Jennie following quickly. The twain embraced and disappeared from sight, locked together in the death agony. Assistance arrived too late to rescue this unhappy couple. Ryan bore an excellent character for industry and sobriety, having been employed on the Annunciation street line of cars for three years. He has a brother in the city, who informs us that two years ago next Christmas a widow was slaughtered by thieves, who nearly killed him. For three or four months past he has been very intimate with Jennie, who lived with her sister, near Annunciation square. During the past week she informed him of her personal condition, and urged him to be united in wedlock, but he would not consent to such an arrangement, as he had reason to believe that she knew another lover in other ways. She told him she could not then marry her, giving his reasons. After that she pursued him, even going to his boarding house, near Sorapuru Market, but invariably conducting herself in a quiet manner. Monday night, after he quit work, they took a stroll along the levee. They then went to his room and remained until 4 o'clock, at which time he was called up. He answered, but did not appear for breakfast. They must have gone directly to the river and executed a plan which might have been agreed on between them, although her words do not indicate that she intended to deliberately commit suicide. He had scarcely touched the water before she followed, apparently determined to close her days with him. Some fishermen in skiffs dragged for the bodies with grapnels, while Ryan's bereaved brother waited near by, so full of sorrow that he was unable to lend the least assistance. When we visited the wharf Jennie's sister had not been apprised of the sad ending of her poor sister. Jennie is of Scotch descent and rather handsome in form and feature. She proved her devotion to the man she loved by taking more than enough to send her to her mother. At dark last evening the bodies had not been recovered.—N. O. Republican, Oct. 11th.

ELOPEMENT.

A CONDUCTOR IN A WRONG TRAIN.

A genuine scandal case has been a recent topic of conversation among the Trojans, the case being one of marital infelicity. The Troy Press dilates thereupon thusly:—"A widely known conductor on a leading railroad, and a resident of Troy, wrote a letter to his wife, who was visiting up north. The letter stated that he intended to make an extended tour to Chicago, Baltimore, and finally to Canada, and that he knew not when he would return. Twenty dollars and a return ticket were inclosed in the letter. The wife's suspicions were aroused by the tenor of the letter, and she hurried home and discovered that her husband had packed up all his effects and sent them away. During the night the husband returned while intoxicated, and immediately attacked his wife, giving her a severe beating. She then laid down in a maudlin sleep, and his wife discovered in his pocket a letter from a married woman, who had always been esteemed as a great personal friend, which revealed the astonishing intelligence that the husband and this woman had been criminally intimate, and that an elopement had been planned. After the husband awoke he left the house, and has not been seen since, and as the woman—who is a resident of Green Island—is also missing, it is inferred that the guilty pair have eloped. The husband's paramour, during the absence of her husband, who is a traveling agent, sold the household effects and thus raised about $1,000. The couple are supposed to be luxuriating in Canada. The case is somewhat peculiar, from the fact that both parties have always been in good social standing, and have never had a breath of suspicion against them before."

A MARRIAGE FOR FUN NOT BINDING.—Chancellor Zabriskie rendered a decision in the case of Virginia McClurg vs. Benjamin F. Terry et al., in the Court of Chancery, at Trenton, N. J., on the 19th inst. Miss McClurg brought suit to have a marriage, which had been performed by a justice of the Peace, set aside by the court. The allegation was that the two parties met at a social gathering, and for the amusement of the company were married by a justice who happened to be present. Afterward the defendant and his family insisted upon the legality of the marriage, and the justice, upon being questioned, did not know whether the parties whom he had joined in wedlock were in earnest or not. The case having come into Chancery, Chancellor Zabriskie decided that a marriage to be valid must be agreed upon by both parties, and he therefore declared the marriage null and void, consequently Virginia was not terrified into a matrimonial alliance against her will.

THE CLEVELAND TRAGEDY.—DR. GALENTINE REMANDED FOR TRIAL.—The case of Dr. Jay F. Galentine, for the murder of Dr. W. H. Jones, came up for preliminary examination before Justice Cleveland, at the Police Court, on the morning of the 9th inst. There was a large crowd in attendance, all the available space in the court room being occupied, the great mass of the spectators being attracted thither out of curiosity. The case was not called until about 11 o'clock, two hours being occupied in disposing of a well selected assortment of drunks and disorderlies. During this time Dr. Galentine remained in one of the ante-rooms in consultation with his attorneys. The prisoner came into the court room and was arraigned before the bar, appearing somewhat pale and with a perceptible nervousness in his manner. In all parts of the room there was a stretching of necks to catch a glimpse of his face. S. E. Adams, principal attorney for the prisoner, addressed the court for a minute or two, stating that after a careful consideration the defence determined to waive a preliminary examination. The prisoner was remanded by Judge Cleveland for trial before the Court of Common Pleas upon the charge of murder. The trial will doubtless take place at the ensuing term, which commences Nov. 7th. The prisoner was remanded to jail, the law not admitting of release on bail in any amount.—Cleveland Herald.

BASE BALL.

A BRIEF SERMON FOR PROFESSIONAL CLUB MANAGERS.

THE SUCCESS OF THE WHITE STOCKINGS.

Surprise is being expressed in various quarters where ball tossers congregate most at the great success of the White Stockings since the latter part of August, for, since the 26th of that month, when their newly organized nine was defeated by the Forest City Club, of Rockford, by a score of 14 to 7, they have not lost a single game; besides which they have not only defeated the Mutuals, Athletics and Atlantics since then, but they have achieved the very object for which the club was organized, viz., to bear off the palm of supremacy from their noted rivals, the Red Stockings, of Cincinnati, a triumph of more value to them than all their other victories combined. What puzzles the fraternity generally is the question as to how a nine, composed of the very same players, with one exception, which were so badly defeated in July and the middle of August should suddenly achieve such decided success. The reason to us seems plain enough. When the White Stockings began their career this season it was with a party which was nothing more than a "picked nine" of strong players, who, though possessed of individual skill, nearly equalling that of the best in the country lacked the one great essential of success, thorough harmony of action in concert, and also were wanting in that club feeling of united effort for the honor and credit of their organization, without which a nine merely works together as an ordinarily "picked nine" of strong players from several clubs. This first nine, too, of the Chicago Club opened play at the commencement of their career with a ball utterly unfit for the use of such a party of skilful fielders as Captain Wood had collected together, their mistake at the onset being their estimating heavy batting records as the chief criterion of excellence; whereas, if anything has been conclusively established by the experience of this season's play more than another, it is that superiority in fielding is the great essential of a victorious career of a base ball nine.

The Chicago nine began their rubber ball career with a series of victories almost invariably marked by heavy batting scores, but also characterized by what was considered discreditable errors in the field. From all of their early campaigns, in which the rubber ball was used with such great results in heavy scores, they returned home with bruised and battered fielders, who required intervals for recuperation before other campaigns could be entered upon. In this way the White Stockings went on until they reached New York, when their nine were more or less the victims of injuries arising from plucky efforts to stop and hold swiftly batted or thrown rubber balls, which it was impossible to stop or hold, to an exent which rendered it impossible for them to do justice to the fielding skill they really possessed. Moreover, they from various causes failed to work together harmoniously; each man almost made the interests of the nine, as a club nine, subservient to his own special interests, each forgetting the important fact that the member of a professional club never promotes his own individual interests more—no matter how circumstances may seem to show to the contrary—than when he does his best to advance the best interests of the club he belongs to.

Such was the position of the Chicago club up to the closing week of August. When we saw Captain Wood here, we pointed out these faults in the management of a club nine to him, and especially warned him of the folly of continuing to use a rubber ball with men possessing the fielding skill the White Stockings did. Circumstances prevented any improvement in the organization of the nine until some weeks after their return from their disastrous eastern tour; finally, however, the nine was re-organized, one of its discordant elements was removed, the mumfin players' rubber ball was re-placed by a dead ball, and from the date of the first experimental game under the new dispensation the progress of the Chicago club has been marked by a series of uninterupted victories, the crowning triumph being the defeat of the strongest nine in the United States in two successive contests. It is true that this latter result was in a measure due to a condition of things in which the very element of success which had previously been monopolised by the Red Stocking nine, of Cincinnati, had been transferred to their Chicago rivals, viz., united and harmonious action, for it has of late been pretty plainly manifested that the Cincinnati club, since their defeat by the Atlantics in June last, have not worked together as effectively as in 1869. One cause of this has been the injudicious, and, in fact, unjust comments of the Cincinnati press on the play of the nine in games wherein the Reds have not been able to sustain their high reputation for invariable success. The fact is, the Cincinnatians have been so puffed up with the great success of their pet club that they have lost sight of the existing fact that the natural progress of the game and the effects of energetic rivalry have led to the organization of nines pretty competent to hold their own against the strongest. Just as it was with the Chicago papers when the White Stockings were being defeated in every game, and no choice was made in abusive epithets in commenting on their failures, so it is now with the Cincinnati press in their comments on the recent defeat of the Reds, all the creditable conduct of the nine, their honorable record, their glorious triumphs, all being for the time forgotten while the club is hors du combat. The Reds are under a cloud now. For the time being we see the "White" above the "Red;" but the same good management, the same harmony of action, the same honest efforts to fight for the credit of the club and not for more stamps, may once more assert its superiority. In the meantime, the White Stockings, under Captain Wood, have only to follow Harry Wright's lead to place themselves on an equal footing with the best, thereby ensuring for the season of 1871 a series of contests in which the old base ball incentive of the honor of winning the trophy alone will prevail, and not the mean and sordid influence of the money receipts and betting ring arrangements, which have been such strong incentives in contests marking the season of 1870.

GREAT GAME AT ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS.

RED STOCKINGS vs. FOREST CITYS.

THE REDS BEATEN BY A SCORE OF 12 TO 5.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE CLIPPER.

Saturday, Oct. 15th, the Forest City boys succeeded in beating their famous opponents by a large majority, and in a parliamentary manner. That the job was well done was evinced by the fact that the Cincinnati boys were whitewashed seven times, and succeeded in reaching the first base but six times during the game. The Reds acknowledged that the Rockfords beat them fairly at every point, playing a game which was about as near perfection as base ball is capable of getting. The game was remarkable for producing seven square home runs, three of which the Forest Citys put into one innings. The afternoon opened with the wind blowing a gale, and the attendance was very small, but before the third innings closed the wind died out, and the balance of the game was played in the finest weather.

The Forest Citys lost the toss and went to the bat at 2.30. D. Sawyer, of the Liberty Club, of Springfield, accepted the position of umpire and performed the duties to general acceptance.

THE GAME.

First Innings.—The Forest City opened play with Addy, who flew out to Waterman. Barnes took his 3d bat on a long hit to r f and came home on a wild throw from Sweasy. Simmons took 2d on a fly over l f, and to 3d on Hastings' slow bounder to Brainard, who put him out at 1st. Foley sent the ball hot to George, who could not hold it, and Simmons came home, but Foley attempting to steal 2d was thrown out by Allison. 2 runs.....For the Reds, George hit sharp through 2d and got home by the skin of his masticators. Gould fouled a fly to Hastings. Waterman got his 1st safe. Allison's long fly was well caught by Simmons. Waterman to 2d on a passed ball, and home by Harry Wright, who put in a home run by a long hit to r f. Leonard out by Addy to Doyle. 3 runs.

2. Stires sent the ball over Harry's head and got in a home run. Doyle flew out to Waterman. Cone took 1st on 3 balls, and Spalding (emulating Stires' performance), put in a tremendous hit and chased Cone round to the home plate. Addy hit to Waterman, who sent the ball to Sweasy; he put it to Gould, and the side was out by a fine double play. No runs.....Waterman's foul fly was captured by Foley on the run. Allison flew out to Barnes. Harry sent one up for Spalding. No run.

4. Cone's hit to Sweasy was muffed by Gould, but as Cone did not run he lost the chance. Spalding fouled to Allison. Addy's high foul was muffed by Waterman, and his hit to George bounded out of his hands and Addy took a life. He started for 2d, and Allison sent the ball true as a line to Sweasy, whereat Bob sat down and slid under Sweasy's hands in a truly graceful manner. Barnes flew to Sweasy. No run .... Leonard hit over r f for a home run. Brainard flew to Barnes. Sweasy got 3d on a hit and came home on a wild pitch. McVey fouled a fly to catcher. George flew to Barnes. 2 runs.

5. Simmons got a tally, assisted by Foley and Stires, who went out on a fly to McVey; Hastings fouled a bound to Waterman; Doyle flew to Sweasy. One run.....Gould fouled to Hastings; Cone, by a good catch, captured Waterman's fly; Allison hit to Foley, who muffed, but, recovering it, he, by a lightning throw to 1st, put the striker out. No run.

6. Cone hit a bounder to Gould and rested; Spalding flew to George; Barnes flew to Sweasy. No run.... Harry fouled a bound, captured by Spalding on the running jump; Leonard flew to Stires and Brainard sent his invitation to Simmons, who accepted it gratefully. No run.

7. Foley got 1st on Leonard's muff of his high fly and home by Stires' fly, on which he put in another home run; Simmons flew to Addy; Hastings died at 1st from George, and Doyle flew to Sweasy. Two runs.....Sweasy flew to Foley, who smiled; McVey flew to Barnes; George hit sharp to Foley, whose hands stop and throw to 1st settled George's hash profoundly. No run.

8. Cone bounded to Sweasy and he let the 1st base alone. Spalding flew to Leonard, Addy hit sharp for 1st, and came home on Barnes' home run, flew to Sweasy, whence he came home on Simmons' hit to George, who failed to hold the ball, and Simmons took 1st and went to 2d on Hastings' hit for 1st. Foley sent the ball flying and took his 1st, bringing Simmons home and Hastings to 2d. Stires' fly was clutched by McVey. 3 runs.....Gould fouled to Hastings, Waterman got 1st, but was forced at 2d by Allison's hit to Barnes. Allison taking 1st. Harry hit in front of home plate and died at 1st from Hastings. No run.

9. Doyle out at 1st from George. Cone hit to Sweasy and died at 1st. Spalding hit a long fly to Leonard. No run.....Addy flew to Simmons. Brainard bounded to Foley and a good throw to 1st stopped him. McVey flew to Foley. No run. We append the score:—

"TROTH."

EUREKA vs. BEACON.

These ball clubs of the Hub turned out a team of well matched nines on the 20th inst., to test their respective merits on the Union grounds, which proved that the Beacons were too light rather for their opponents, the result being a partial eclipse for the former, as the score shows. They made a better show than in their first contest, however, when the Eurekas found them out to the tune of 19 to 9. We here append the score of the game played on the 20th:—

ATHLETIC vs. MUTUAL.

On Tuesday, Oct. 18th, the Athletics, after winning the first game of their series with the Atlantics, played a practice game with the Mutual nine on the Union grounds, L. I., whereas the attendance was smaller than at the Capitoline grounds the day previous, owing to the cold, windy weather, and the high tariff of 50 cents admission, a poor policy to adopt for this class of contests.

The Athletics felt pretty sanguine of success, especially when they saw that the Mutuals were minus the services of Welters, and therefore had to play their nine out of their regular positions, Eggler catching in place of C. Mills, Higham playing at third base in place of Nelson, while the right and centre fields had new occupants in C. Mills and Nelson. Martin was the pitcher, and a more effective one for a first class fielding nine, using a dead ball, is not to be found in the country. This was fully proved not only in Troy against the Haymaker nine—all good batters—but also in this game against the crack batsmen of the Athletics, who, in the whole of this match only earned two runs off Martin's pitching, though by fielding errors they were allowed to score 12. The game began at 3.45 P. M., with the Mutuals at the bat, and they were put out in the order of taking their stand at the bat, whereas the Athletics scored 4 runs for their share, chiefly by errors, however, as only one secured a base on a hit.

In the second innings the Mutuals began to hit safely, scoring 5 runs and earning 2, the Athletics being disposed of for a single. The next three innings added as many runs to the Mutual score, though but one run was earned, the Athletics, on their side, being unable to add a single run, the fielding of the Mutuals being sharp, Hatfield making a pretty double play. This left the score at the close of the fifth innings at 6 to 5 in favor of the Mutuals, who had thus far played a good up-hill game. In the sixth innings the Mutuals batted well again and scored 4 runs, two of which were earned. They then allowed the Athletics to score 2. This left the totals at 10 to 7 in favor of New York, and the game began to promise a Mutual victory. In the seventh and eighth innings, the Athletics not only whitewashed the Mutuals, but again were allowed to add runs to their score by some muffs and poor throws, and, therefore, when the Mutuals went to the bat in their ninth innings they had to get two runs to lead their opponents. By Athletic errors they scored the required number and then went to the field to whitewash the Athletics and win; but this they failed to do, and, as the Philadelphians scored one run and thereby tied the game, another innings had to be played in order to settle the question as to which nine was to have the ball. In the tenth innings, though no less than six of the Mutuals went to the bat, not a run could they obtain, and, as the Athletics were also disposed of for a blank score, this innings ended, as before, with the totals at 12 to 12. The contest had now assumed a very interesting position, and, though it was just upon sundown and there was scarcely time to play another innings, the crowd were anxious to see the game decided in favor of one party or the other. The Mutuals, however, did not care about running the risk, nor were the Athletics over anxious for it, and so, greatly to the disappointment of the crowd, a compromise was arrived at between the two captains, a drawn game was agreed upon and the umpires were obliged to call the game. The score:—

MUTUAL vs. YALE.

The Collegian ball tossers of Yale College took a trip to New York on Wednesday, Oct. 19th, and the same day played their return game with the Mutual Club, the first of which was played as far back as June 25th, on which occasion the Mutuals won by a score of 49 to 17. The Mutuals then handled the lively rubber ball, on this occasion the dead ball was used, but inasmuch as the Yales were unable to appear in their full strength, the Mutuals had an easy task presented to them to win, and therefore the contest was not marked by any superior play, the Mutuals winning easily by the totals of 31 to 9. Only one of the Yales played in first class style, Maxwell especially distinguishing himself, as the score shows. Nelson did about the best fielding on the other side, Strong and Higham making the best display at the bat. We append the full score:—

ONE OF PECK & SNYDER'S RED DEAD BALLS, which for color and durability have the preference of others by the majority of first class ball players, was used in the Mutual vs. Yale College match on the 19th inst., and notwithstanding the knocking about it got, 40 runs being scored, it survived the ordeal, and at the close of the game was as good as a new one, save being a little soiled, which speaks volumes in regard to its merits. We write from personal observation. Those who doubt can find proof by seeing said ball now on exhibition at Messrs. Peck & Snyder's base ball emporium, No. 126 Nassau street, N. Y.

AWAY DOWN IN ALABAM'.

Now that the icy breath of the wintry monarch is commencing to be felt, the ball clubs of the northern portion of Uncle Sam's territory are, one by one, closing play for the season, and ere long the fields which have been worn to trod by the nimble feet of the devotees of our national pastime will know them no more until the opening of the season of '71. While bats, balls and other paraphernalia of the game are being stowed away by them, however, their brethern of the extreme southern states are entering upon the most active part of their campaign, which will doubtless be more vigorously prosecuted in that region during the incoming winter than ever before, as drawing our inferences from the preparations made in different localities to keep the ball rolling, as likewise the activity exhibited by individual clubs in the several states. On Oct. 8th the Montgomery City Club played a game with the Seville Club, of Pensacola, on the new grounds, Montgomery, Ala., which terminated as below:—

The Bonnie Blues, considered the champions of the state, having issued a challenge to the Montgomery County club, the latter accepted for a single game, which was played on the grounds of the association on the 10th inst., the former being allowed the odds of the two outsiders, with privilege of playing another at any stage of the game, choice of ball, innings and umpire. At 3:30 the game commenced, with the Montgomerys at the bat, and it was an even thing until the commencement of the eighth innings, in which the M. C.'s scored 6 runs to the 2 made by their opponents, and as darkness compelled a cessation of play while the M. C.'s were at the bat in the next innings, the game was decided on the eighth, the score being as follows:—

The Montgomerys were announced to play at the East Alabama Fair held at Opelika on the 18th, and they are likewise booked for the fair at Columbus, Ga., on Nov. 1st. They were also to play the Levilles again on the 21st, and a packed nine from West Florida on the 22d. From this it will be seen that this club is composed of energetic young men, and possesses a nine which has already made for itself an excellent local reputation, with a prospect of soon becoming more widely known, through contests with and victories over prominent clubs in other cities of the south.

ÆTNA vs. ERIE.

PITCHER WANTED.—A first class, swift pitcher is advertised for in another column by the president of the Montgomery, Ala., Association, and as his services are required during the winter season only, this affords a good opportunity for some one of our crack players in this position to put in the idle months with pleasure and profit. For further particulars see card.

THE ATLANTICS AND THEIR RECENT DEFEATS.

A correspondent, who signs himself "An Agonized Inquirer," sends us the following difficult question to answer. We give his letter in full:—

NEW YORK, October 20th, 1870.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—I have for some time been longing to know what's the matter with the Atlantic Base Ball Club, of Brooklyn. Starting off at the beginning of the season, with every prospect of a brilliant and successful career, they finish up with a catalogue of disastrous defeats and lose the championship. Just look at their record lately—defeated by the Forest Citys, 13 to 12; Red Stockings, 14 to 3; Mutuals, 10 to 4; White Stockings, 9 to 4; Stars, 31 to 24; Haymakers, 12 to 10; Athletics, 11 to 7 and 15 to 3, and perhaps a dozen more which I can't recollect, though by looking through my file of CLIPPERS I should no doubt be able to remember that I should give it up in disgust. The Atlantic Club had always been a favorite of mine, and I had supposed in my innocence that they were capable of defeating any club in the country, but their defeats of late somewhat shake my faith in their invincibility. Now I suppose that the Atlantics are losing these games as a matter of policy, and mean to come out strong next year, or are they playing a quarely and being defeated on their merits? If the latter is the case I think they had better sell out cheap. Yours, respectfully, AN AGONIZED INQUIRER.

No club in the country had a finer opportunity afforded them for achieving a brilliant success during the present season than the Atlantics after their glorious victory over the Red Stockings in June last, and yet scarcely a week had followed their splendid display in that game ere they succumbed to the Athletic nine in a score of 19 to 3. Having missed the golden opportunity, they seemed to have lost sight of every other incentive to exertion except that of mere gate money receipts. The fact is, the Atlantics may date their decline in public estimation, and the loss of that prestige of invariable success which had carried them through many a tough fight to victory, from the time when they concluded to work solely for "dollars and cents," and to let their efforts to retain the title of champions be secondary consideration. Whether they have wilfully sacrificed games or not they alone can state, but most assuredly the instances are not few in which they have entered upon contests in such form as to almost insure defeat, either by being short handed or in being indifferent in regard to making any earnest efforts to win: witness the striking contrast in their play in the first Star match and their first game with the Red Stockings, compared to their games with first class nines in August and September of late they have been in no condition to win, the sickness of their pitcher being a drawback to their success. But seven of their nine are up to the playing mark of first class professionals as the estimate now runs, besides which there is evidently a lack of harmony and mutual confidence, without which no nine can hope for success. With the antecedents the Atlantics possess there is an excellent basis for a successful re-organization for 1871, but in such case better management is one needed requisite, besides which they will have to fall back upon the old nine's incentive of fighting for the honor of the old Atlantic banner before they can hope to return to the good old days of Atlantic victories.

SAGACIOUS CANINE BALLISTS.—Old England.—Some forty years ago a game of cricket was played for a considerable stake at Harvistoke Common, near Rickmansworth, Eng., between two gentlemen of Middlesex on one side and Mr. Francis Trumper, a farmer residing at Harefield, and a thoroughbred sheep dog in his possession, on the other. Before the game began the odds were five to one against Mr. Trumper and his faithful companion, but, as the match proceeded, four to one was laid on the quadrupedic wicket-keeper. In the first innings the two gentlemen got three runs with the greatest difficulty. The shepherd dog in his manner when he was going to bowl, and the moment the ball was hit off started Fido after it at full speed and carried it back in his mouth to his master with equal velocity. Though the two, who had the first innings, made several long hits, the dog fielded so well that they never made more at a time than a single run. Mr. Trumper and his mate then went in and the dog stood at his wicket "like a man" until he saw that it was advisable to run; then he cantered past his master at a judiciously considered pace. The result of the first innings for "man and dog" was a grand total of five. After luncheon the two gentlemen again scored three in their second innings, one of them having been splendidly "caught out" by Fido. When their competitors went to the wickets the betting was odds on "the shepherd." Two runs were scored for the long-

Songs for the People.

KISSING ON THE SLY.

I've thought the matter over,
And what I think is this:—
There are very few, if any
Things, made sweeter than a kiss.
Especially when coming
Or watchful eyes are nigh;
What can be any sweeter
Than kissing on the sly?
Chorus.—Ye little bashful maidens,
Ye youths—before you die—
Take my advice, and try a
Little kissing on the sly.

Some love to walk by moonlight,
Some on the lake to glide,
And some to hold the ribbons
Of horses by their sides;
But I know what is better,
Ah, yes indeed, do I!
To all or those what I prefer
Is kissing on the sly.
Chorus.—Ye little bashful, &c.

A maid may look demure,
As though she didn't know
Of such a thing as kissing,
Or think of doing so;
Of course all this is proper
When anybody's by,
But—what your opportunity—
And kiss her on the sly.
Chorus.—Ye little bashful, &c. J. H. B.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Oct. 24, '70.

THE chief event of the past week was the Earthquake, which made its first appearance on Thursday, Oct. 20, in the presence of a large and unappreciative audience. It achieved an unmistakable success, and came very near bringing down the house at every movement. Although the people of New York are very fond of sensations, this was not one to create a desire for a repetition, or good wishes for its continued success, notwithstanding it has left behind it a lasting impression. A provincial correspondent, a resident of one of those one-horse towns where the sensation did not make a stand, wishes to know if we can give him the route ahead of the Earthquake.....And while speaking of this convulsion of nature, another event has served to convulse the community at large, and that is the spirited discussion between our dear brothers, the Rev. Dr. Tilton and the equally reverend Dr. Fulton. The subject in dispute between our holy and contrite brethren is of the temperance persuasion, our friends not only preaching good will and temperance to men, in their public capacity, but showing by their own actions that precept is better than practice. Dear brother Fulton, in the goodness of his heart and fulness of his stomach, charges that dear brother Tilton was seen at a public place to deliberately imbibe of the ruby wine which gladdens the heart of man, and makes him like unto a "guzzling Billy." Whereupon, the other man charges brother Fulton with having entered a lager beer saloon, and there and then partaking of divers and sundry glasses of the revivifying beverage, and other German provender, which converted him into a "gorging Sam." Each denies the charge of the other, but as we know the worthy dispensers of the gospel truth to be men of undoubted veracity, we take their word, without ball, and can come to no other conclusion than that each did as therein set forth, that the one took his straight, while the other reveled in the less intoxicating lager bier. How it will end, we cannot say; but we would m a spirit of brotherly love suggest to brothers Poole, Gayler, Fulton, Daly and others, that this little episode would make a good work for one of the most emotional and domestic dramas ever conceived by weak and erring man. Let the dear brothers we have enumerated kindly give the subject a thought, and work it up as

A TILT AT TILTON;

OR, THE WONDERFUL VAGARIES OF TWO PASTORS.

We charge nothing for the idea—there's money in it.

.....We have often, while at a theatre, or other place of amusement, observed the recklessness which some persons manifest in order to get a view of what is going on, on the stage, at the expense of others. Among these impolite habits is one practiced by many persons of rising in their seats full length, life size, thereby, of course, obstructing the view of those immediately behind them. We were somewhat amused, the other evening, on seeing one of these rising young men so completely floored that he got out of the place like he had been discharged from a Mutilleuse. This is how it happened: The young person had been very uneasy in his seat, continually jumping up like he had been taking a violent dose of jalap; and bless you, this so disconcerted the gentleman in the rear, whose view was broken by this indiscreet young man, that he mildly remarked:—"Excuse me, sir; but is there not something strange, something unusual about you?" "Certainly not," testily replied the person; "but why do you ask?" "Well," said the man in the rear, "I can generally manage to make out, and understand most of people, but I'll be hanged if I can see through you!" It is needless to add that that ended the wild career of the early riser.....'Shoo Fly" having had its season, and departed with all its honors on its head, another insect is coming forward to claim our recognition and favor, and this latest arrival has been introduced to the gentlemen of the San Francisco Minstrels, under the name of "Let Me Be," which "Our Jim" alleges has reference to the little stinging devil which perforated his diapharm while he was snuffing around among the flowers last summer. In view of the exit of the "Shoo Fly," and the advent of the other insect opera, we append a few lines in an

ODE TO A "LET-ME-BE."

WRITTEN BY A LITTLE SCHOOL BOY—Little School Boy, "Our Jim."

Fly away and "let me be," in this universe so wide
There is ample room for thee—you may not my nose to stride;
No delight to me you bring—your approach I interdict—
Should you pierce me with your sting, in sting pain you may inflict.
"Let me be" I do not wish enough of evil unto thee,
Yet I feel all overish when you come so near to me.
Wayward bee, be warned by me, come not near me with your sting—
If I grasp you, little bee, you'll become a lifeless thing.

Let me be.

.....Infectious diseases are apt to create dissensions even among well disciplined and harmonious Thespians and to induce violations of law, human and divine, which but re-act upon the guilty parties. We were much surprised, as well as deeply grieved, recently, to learn that three performers at the Academy of Music, New Orleans, had appeared before the audience on a certain occasion in a state of delirious uncertainty, if not of decided and well defined spiritual intemperance. For thus deviating from the path of rectitude and the perpendicularity which all men should maintain before a public assemblage, they were at once discharged by the trate manager. Much we wondered, much we marveled at this contretemps of the trio, but the solution to this problem has been solved at last, which must certainly place the manager in a very embarrassing position. It is well known that the yellow fever has been committing depredations in New Orleans for some time past, and our professional friends, being unacclimated and fearing it might assail them, took counsel of certain great medicine men, whose status in society was sans reproche. These physicians, who had already healed themselves, did calmly and without malice advise the feverish sons of Thespis to drink largely of the flowing bowl; that whiskey, administered, was a sure preventative of disease, and that the more they drank, straight from the shoulder, the more they wouldn't take the fever. Though contrary to their principles of temperance, to their ideas of rigat, they "listened to the voice of the siren," and, possessing themselves of large doses of the great medicine, did partake thereof according to directions on the bottle. In the language of the inspired poet,

"They drank not wisely, but too well,"

Yes, beloved readers, they drank, and fell! and thus escaped the attack of the other fell disease. Were they to blame when physicians ordered them to dose themselves? Let the veil of charity be thrown around the scene. But who will envy the manager his feelings when he hears of the cause of their fall, and too late learns that he has summarily dismissed innocent men who had merely sought to escape the assaults of the yellow fever? The manager pace thd well to be a shining light in the professon, but in this uncalled for discharge of three of his unacclimated men, he has certainly, for the cause of the piece, lost cast.

.....Speaking of pantomime, do you remember, gentle reader, do you remember, or, rather, will you ever forget, the first time you witnessed a pantomime, with its beautiful fairies and Harlequins and Columbine, and Pantaloon, but high over all, the funny clown? Ah—but we will describe it in verse:—

OUR FIRST PANTOMIME.

How well we remember our feelings the time
We were taken in witness our first pantomime—
How our hearts jumped with joy at the light and the glare,
How we cheered for the band of each recognized air;
When the curtain went up how we mounted our seat,
The whole, or to see Columbine dressed so neat;
And the Harlequin, flashing in patches and spangles,
Or the Clown's or the Pantaloon's cornical wrangles.
Sure, we thought that the Harlequin, tricked out so fine,
Must be lonely, indeed, with the fair Columbine;
And the Columbine looked so handsome and gay
That we wanted our sisters to dress the same way.
How we laughed at the Pantaloon's many mishaps,
How we'd start when the spirits came up through the traps.
How we'd laugh when he'd pour in his pockets the ale,
Or rob some poor wandering dog of his tail.
How we chuckled to see the o'erpowering rage
Of the people who fail when he battered the stage—
And we thought, when our thoughts he permitted to roam,
How we'd banter the sisters for the possession at home.
And here we may say, when we came on that lark,
We were met without supper to bed in the dark.
We'd doubted the fairy tales with indignation,
But our doubts were dispelled by the "Grand Transformation."
We believed in the fairies, the imps and their tricks,
And we believe to this day they shared our delights.
We may have many pleasures, but never a time
Can we have such delight as the first pantomime—
You may laugh at our folly, you may say we don't care,
And all grow on in years to their fancies grow rare,
And though it be childish, we've some fancies left,
And the Clown's one of which we will not be bereft.
We believe—I doubt policy live in any clime—
And we're sure that the little ch'ls all talk in rhyme;
We firmly believe in the pantomime's fun,
And we don't want to know how the tricks can be done.
We believe the constant glitter, costume, so quaint,
And we want, with the grandest of paint.
When Clown dubs the Policeman, who spoils his thefts quite,
Our verdict shall still be, "Policeman served right."
We believe Columbine, she's a pretty sweet taste,
And we won't believe in anything 'neath Harlqin's mask.
We believe Pantaloon from his shoes to his tuft,
But we won't believe the clothe that he's his with are stuffed;
And you couldn't convince us, if ages you talked,
That the Clown wasn't born all reconfilioned and chalked.
We'll go to the pantomime till our last year,
And see ourselves pictured in the children when there;
We'll watch the gay little cues, shape in their joy,
And we'll laugh just as loud as the oldest boy—
Though our face should be wrinkled, our head covered with rime,
We'll still be a boy at our LAST PANTOMIME.

NOTICE TO THE PROFESSION.

We wish it distinctly understood that we have no connection with, or interest in, any dramatic agency in this or any other city. Our attention has been called to the fact that parties have been in the receipt of letters bearing this heading:—"Col. T. Allston Brown, Dramatic Department NEW YORK CLIPPER," etc. Col. Brown's connection with this paper ceased on May 30th of the current year, and the use made since that time of the name of the CLIPPER, as mentioned above, has been entirely without our knowledge or consent, and is calculated to mislead the profession and public who may have business in that direction. Therefore, let us repeat that we are not interested in any agency, that Col. Brown has not been connected with the dramatic or any other department of the NEW YORK CLIPPER since May 30th, 1870, and that the use of the name of this paper by him or any other agent, is entirely without warrant and not sanctioned by us. Managers, performers, and all others interested, will please take notice, and be guided accordingly.

City Summary.

THE TRAGEDY OF "MACBETH" is, probably, one of the most difficult of all of Shakespeare's productions to place satisfactorily before a miscellaneous audience, and more particularly is this made manifest when the attempt is hurried and proper attention is not paid to the surrounding adjuncts. The character of Lady Macbeth has, of late years, seldom found a satisfactory representative, and it got often assumed now-a-days by any actress from choice. Yet on Tuesday evening, Oct. 18th, this tragedy was produced at the Academy of Music for the especial purpose of presenting Fanny Janauschek in this role, and no more unsatisfactory theatre for the proper presentation of this tragedy could have been found in this country. The sad deficiency in appropriate scenery and costumes for which this edifice is somewhat renowned was made painfully apparent on this occasion, many of the scenes being clad in dominoes of bright colors and ornate trimmings, which have done service in all the operatic masques since the re-building of the Academy. Mlle. Janauschek's performance of Lady Macbeth cannot conscientiously be pronounced an artistic success. Her pronunciation of the text was more apparently defective in this than in any role in which she has hitherto appeared, and she was very deficient in giving expression to the quiet, subtle passages, which should have afforded the appropriate contrast to the more powerfully depicted scenes. She possesses little tenderness, and it is only in characters requiring a bold, strong, and almost masculine portrayal that she excels. In the sleep-walking scene she was excellent, and she introduced a new bit of business that was quite artistic. Accidentally moving against a chair the noise produced suggested to the mind in its somnambulic state the "knocking in the south entry." What are the proper costumes for this tragedy has ever been a mooted point, and so long as they are all of any one period no special objection would be raised, but those worn upon this occasion by Macbeth and Lady Macbeth were of periods divided by several hundred years. Mr. Walter Montgomery was not entirely satisfactory in the character of Macbeth, his performance being uneven, at times too languid and at others too melodramatic, with an inclination to overact. We would prefer seeing this artist in lighter roles, for which his natural and artistic abilities adapt him. Mr. J. B. Studley played Macduff in an excellent manner, and won on several occasions the approbation of the audience. Mr. Mark Smith sang the music of Hecate finely. The other characters call for no special attention, but were all fairly acted. The play of LOUDON'S SWORD was unnecessarily prolonged the performance to an unseasonable hour, and had better have been omitted. The tragedy was presented with the following cast:—

Mlle Janauschek	Lady Macbeth
Walter Montgomery	Macbeth
J. B. Studley	Macduff
Mark Smith	Hecate
Gentlewoman	Miss Hardenbergh
First Witch	A. H. Davenport
Second Witch	Nellie Mortimer
Third Witch	James Donn
Banquo	George De Vere
Duncan	T. J. Hind
Malcolm	Mr. Egbert
Donalbain	Miss Ames
Ross	F. Monroe
Lennox	Mr. Davey
Seyton	Mr. Nesbit
Physician	Mr. Dunbar
Fleance	Miss Norwood
Bleeding Soldier	Mr. Ramsey
Officer	Mr. Corrister

MISS MINNIE FOSTER, of Boston, the little brunette actress of the "Lotta" school, will soon make her appearance in New York in songs and dances, banjo solos, clog, &c., we understand. We learn that a Boston gentleman is about to write a play suited to the little lady's style, in which she can display her talents as an actress and also introduce her banjo solos, dances, &c.

MR. SANFORD, of Courtney and Sanford's Amphitheatre, Lima, sailed for Lima per steamer "Alaska," Oct. 20th, and expected to reach his company Nov. 4th. He is accompanied by the bare back rider and tight-rope artist, Madame Rose Dunalie, who arrived here by "Anchor" line steamer from Glasgow, and was engaged by telegram expressly for this company. He has also with him from this city, the European gymnasts, Lavando and Lorenzo, the Rosalie Sisters, Sig. Lopez and family, and H. Dorr. He also shipped per same steamer, in charge of the keeper, the performing grizzly bear, Samson, that has been at the Central Park since May last.

AMERICA will be overrun with European artists if the war between France and Prussia is not brought to an end. Already quite a number have found their way here, and others are preparing to follow. What with broken French, broken Dutch and broken China, it will be a great wonder if some of our managers are not also broken before the season ends.

AND WHILE we are in a grumbling humor, let us mildly ask if it isn't time that our one-character stars should give us a change? Here we have Jefferson trying to run through an engagement on one piece, and that one by no means a good play, although the one character is good. People are beginning to inquire whether Jefferson can really perform any other character than Rip Van Winkle. Maggie Mitchell went for a long time on "Fanchon," but she was at last brought to her "Little Barefoot," and now she has quite a number of good plays, all of which she appears in to great advantage. Lotta was inducted to travel singlehanded, but she took advice, and she now gives her patrons a change. Although Edwin Booth manages to run a season through on two or three plays here, he cannot do it outside of New York. When he travels he finds it necessary to give a round of his characters. By all means, let our one-character stars awake from their sleepy influence, and give us a change, if for no other purpose than to show that some things can be done as well as others.

THE LYDIA THOMPSON TROUPE, on Oct. 17th, appeared in this city after a prolonged provincial tour, at Wood's Museum, which was the scene of their first triumphs in the country. On that evening and during the week, also on the Saturday matinee, the artists composing this troupe appeared in a burlesque by Henry J. Byron, specially written and adapted for them, entitled "Lurline," which was produced with an excellent mise en scene and the following cast:—

Sir Rupert	Lydia Thompson
Seneschal	John L. Hall
Wilfild	H. Stewart
Albert	Alice Atherton
Rinaldo	C. M. Manley
Baron Wits	W. B. Cahill
Count Calimazon	Marie Lymore
The Family Herald	[illegible]

Miss Thompson has lost none of her powers of pleasing, and acts with the same abandon, dances with the same agility and sings in as pleasing a manner as when she first came to these shores. Her performances are ever satisfactory and her manners graceful and attractive. John L. Hall, the new comedian of this troupe, who joined it at San Francisco, is a good actor, and has a keen appreciation of mirth and wit, as several gags introduced by him amply testified. His make-up was very comical, and he played the Seneschal in a quaint and humorous manner. His voice is not particularly strong, and some musical selections sung by him should be changed, especially if Sailors from "Il Talico" be in the whole, as may be considered a desirable acquisition to the troupe, and will undoubtedly become a favorite here. Willie Edouin, in female attire, made up a la Bonfanti, executed a number of burlesque dances in imitation of various premieres, which displayed a remarkable degree of agility and knowledge of the terpsichorean art. In the third scene of act 1st a moral ballet was given by a number of young ladies, made up to resemble certain celebrated ladies. The burlesque is as disjointed as such productions usually are, and may be regarded simply as a vehicle for the introduction of the various specialties of the artists. Upon the whole, it was enjoyable and was very well acted. Miss Pauline Markham and Miss Marie Longmore are deserving of especial commendation. Full houses have witnessed the performances during the week, and on several nights even standing room was at a premium. The auditorium of this house is eminently adapted for this style of performance, and we opine that burlesque will continue to reign supreme here for some time to come. At the matinee performances during the week, save Saturday, a burlesque entitled "Enoch Arden" has been presented to fair business.

MR. FELIX ROSENBS, whose performance and make-up as Quilp, in "Little Nell," at Niblo's, has been so highly approved of by press and public, solicits engagements by a card in another column, to which we refer for address, etc.

"WEB WILLIE WINKIE" continues to attract very large audiences at the Olympic Theatre, where George L. Fox, by his humorous and mirthful vagaries as clown, keeps them all in the best of spirits. The children of the city are in high glee at the re-announcement of their favorite amusement, and their bright smiling faces, so plentifully scattered among the audience, in conjunction with the performances upon the stage, present a local ensemble that would cheer the heart of an anchorite. Pretty Miss Beane is very attractive as Columbine, and the Pantaloon and Harlequin are constantly growing in favor with the patrons of this house.

MR. FRED. G. MADDEN has furnished a new play for Joseph Murphy, entitled "Help," and has concluded star engagements for that gentleman in Troy, Albany and Buffalo, N. Y., Cleveland and Cincinnati, O.

THE NEW YORK CIRCUS is now in full operation at its building in Fourteenth street. The trappings and decorations of the house and the costumes of the performers are all bright and new, and some very excellent equestrian and acrobatic feats are nightly presented. The jokes of the clown contain hits at the follies of the day, and have an air of freshness. The bright, merry faces of the children, who form a considerable part of the audience, are continually wreathed with the smile of approbation, and many an older heart is gladdened at their mirth. Excellent order is maintained here, and the interior of the building, having been freshly decorated, presents a neat and clean appearance. Don Leonii, aerial gymnast, makes his first appearance here to-night, Oct. 24th.

AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE "Le Petit Faust" was presented on Monday evening, Oct. 17th, with a partial change of cast. Mlle. Susanne Thal appeared as Marguerite, vice Montaland; Mons. Variet (for whom it is said the part was written, and was originally played by him,) as Valentine, vice Hermann; and Mons. Adrien as the Coachman, vice M. Cayla. The change was no improvement, upon the whole. Mlle. Thal has a better voice, and sang the music more satisfactorily than Mlle. Montaland, but could not compare with her in personnel or in acting. Mons. Variet was sadly deficient in comicality, and by bringing himself into direct comparison with such an excellent artist as Mons. Hermann was certainly an error, and the artist's reputation suffered in consequence. On Wednesday evening, Oct. 19th, the "Grand Duchess" was produced, with the following cast:—

The Grand Duchess	Lea Silly
Wanda	Susanne Thal
Fritz	M. Chaulieu
Prince Paul	A. Hermann
Baron Puck	W. Variet
General Boum	Mr. Aulcey
Baron Grog	M. Valter
Napoleone	M. Brunet
Isa	Mlle. Jessee
Antonia	Mlle. Jones
Olga	Mlle. T. Dartin
Charlotte	Mlle. L. Dartin

Mlle. Silly failed to give satisfaction in her representation of the Grand Duchess. Her voice gave greater evidence than ever of its hard use, and with the exception of "Dites lui," which she sang in a charming manner, and was rapturously encored, the part was by no means a success. She failed in both singing and acting. In short, the entire performance—if we except Mr. Hittemans' personation of Prince Paul, which was artistic and pleasing, and M. Cassins' Fritz, which was acceptable—was far below any performance we have hitherto had of this opera. The performance did not commence until nearly a quarter of nine, and the introduction of a very long ballet divertissement in the second act served to prolong the performance to a very unseasonable hour. The American public of late have been surfeited with ballet, and we think if they were allowed a period of rest, at some future time the appetite for this style of amusement would become keener. On Saturday, Mlle. Celine Montaland appeared as the Grand Duchess, and Mons. Duchesne, the original representative of General Boum in this country, appeared in that character, he having made his first appearance with this troupe on Oct. 21st. La Montaland infused a good deal of life into the character of the Duchess and acted it well, with dash and abandon. She sang the music very well, considering her recent illness, and literally brought down the house upon her first appearance in this role. Duchesne, as Boum, was excellent and fully sustained the high reputation he had won in days past. The performance of this opera bouffe is now thoroughly enjoyable, and on the above evening it was performed to a very good sized audience. It will be repeated several times during the present week, with Mlles. Silly and Montaland alternately in the role of the Duchess.

"MAN AND WIFE" continues to amuse the patrons of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, but it is announced to be withdrawn shortly, and "Fernande" will occupy its place.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 643 Broadway, publishes several cards in another column, to which we refer managers and the profession. Ella Wesner, character vocalist, can be engaged for two weeks through him; and Little Nell, the protean actress, with her specialty of "Katy Did," has some vacant dates for which he is prepared to make engagements. A double bass player and a first-class combination, to open a new theatre, are wanted to send their terms. A first class business agent desires an engagement.

GIOVANNA MAZZERI, premiere danseuse, can be addressed as per advertisement.

SADI D'JALMA, contortionist, who has just closed an engagement at the Globe Theatre, advertises that he is prepared to negotiate with responsible managers.

THE NEW SONG, "Off Like a Rocket," written and composed for Miss Linda Hindle by our contributor Chas. M. Connolly, ("The Modest Quencher"), is said to be a taking and an original air. Miss Hindle's neat and happy rendition of it is received with great favor and applause.

HARRY LESLIE, performer on the high rope, has almost entirely recovered from the effects of his accident last season, and, by the coming spring, will once more be prepared to accept engagements.

MR. FRANK DARBY arrived in the city on Oct. 21st from California. He has been absent several years, during which time he has made a tour around the world.

AT THE GLOBE THEATRE an excellent programme has been presented during the past week. The performance commenced with a sketch called the "Living Portrait," in which John Hart, Add Hyman, George L. Stonts and Mrs. R. Tiston appeared; Miss Agnes Sutherland sang a ballad and won an encore; the Prince Sadi de Jalma appeared in his slender act; Hughey Dougherty delivered a comical oration upon matters and things in general. J. D. Kelly gave an excellent performance upon the concertina which evinced great skill. His imitations upon this instrument of a bugle call and a snare drum were very good. He then performed "The Girl I Left Behind Me" upon a novel instrument constructed of pieces of well seasoned wood, varying in size and thickness, which were placed upon two strings of wood transversely laid. The piece of wood being struck with two sticks emitted a clear and pleasant musical sound. His performance of the air referred to was very correct, and gave evidence of great skill of manipulation and evident laborious practice. After this he performed an air upon the violin, holding it in a variety of difficult positions, at the conclusion of which he gave several excellent imitations of animals. Andy McKee performed what might well be termed a contortionist and dance in a very clever manner. Charles and Carrie Austin executed a lightning drill with muskets which displayed great quickness, strength and skill. Lizzie Kelsey sang two serio comic songs with one change of costume, but as she had already sung the same nightly during the engagement of the Thorne Comique, it attracted little attention, although occasionally would enhance this lady's popularity. Eph. Horn, assisted by Hughey Dougherty, performed some amusing burlesque acts of prestidigitation. Master Barney sang his usual number of Dutch songs, to the delight of the audience. A ballet d'action introduced the Misses Betty Bigl, Jones and Phillips in a number of pleasing dances. Sheridan and Mack, elegantly costumed, sang in white faces a double song and dance which was deservedly encored. Charles Howard gave an excellent portrayal of the old plantation negro in a character song and dance. Mr. Collins and Miss Martha Wren appeared in a musical act entitled "Barney's Courtship." Mr. Collins personating an elderly lady and Barney the lover. Miss Wren looked pretty, sang tastefully, costumed and sang her music well, although laboring under a severe cold. The Rizarelli Brothers appeared in feats upon the trapeze which have been so often performed before that they possess little novelty, and the only real startling feat consisted of the double somersault, by Francisco, from the bar of the trapeze and falling into the net, the distance across the hall not being sufficient for him to use other trapeze. On Thursday evening the house was not fortunate in a corner seat from which to witness this feat. This theatre is not adapted for performances of this kind, as the net is stretched directly over the parquet, and of course the audience were compelled to vacate the seats beneath it. The performance concluded with a farce called "Great Expectations," in which Add. Eyman, Hughey Dougherty and John Hart appeared. Miss Pleasie Young, also announced, and Miss Minnie Hindle, the "Maid of Steel," and Mlle. Angela, the "Herculean Lady," with the boy "Young Zephyr," a portion of Colville's European Novelties, will form the chief attraction during the present week. On Oct. 31st, Mr. J. G. Forde, an English artist, also one of Colville's European novelties, will make his first appearance in this city in a novel style of entertainment, which is difficult to describe, but which, although unknown here, is very popular in England, and Mr. Forde has there achieved much reputation in its delineation.

THE POMPOUS DIGNITY, mingled with truckling servility, as displayed in the character of Digby Grant; the quaintness of the commercial traveler, Mr. Jenkins; the joyousness and sunshine which Lottie liberally dispenses; the quiet, gentlemanly ease of Jack Wyatt; the placid manners of Dolly Grant; the kind organic love and warm affection of the lady-like Ida, as portrayed in Mr. Albert's comedy of the "Two Roses," furnished a very agreeable evening's entertainment at Wallack's Theatre during the past week.

LOTTA closed her engagement at Niblo's Garden on Oct. 22d. "Little Nell and the Marchioness" was withdrawn after the performance on the 20th. The business during the early part of the week dropped off considerably. On Friday, the 21st, Lotta received a benefit, on which she appeared as Captain Charlotte in a two-act comedy of the same name, and in "Andy Blake," a comedy by Boucicault. She was welcomed by a good sized audience, who appeared pleased with her acting. The same bill was repeated at the matinee and evening performance of Saturday. Lotta went to Boston, Mass., where she commences an engagement at the Boston Theatre this evening, Oct. 24th, and upon the same date at Niblo's Garden the Grand Duchess combination will commence an engagement. The operas announced for the first week are as follows:—"Martha" on the 24th, the "Huguenots" on the 25th, the "Marriage of Figaro" on the 26th, "Fra Diavolo" on the 27th, "Il Trovatore" on the 28th, "Bohemian Girl" at the matinee and "Oberon" on the evening of the 29th. There will be no advance in prices, and as the troupe consists of two full companies, it is probable there will be little necessity for any change in the operas as announced.

AT LINA EDWIN'S THEATRE the fair manageress has reappeared in person and played the character of Cinderella in the burlesque of that name all the past week. In addition thereto the burlesque of "Sonnambula," with Stuart Robson, Eliza Weatherby, Harry Jackson and others in the cast, has been presented. During the week commencing Oct. 24, "The Captain of the Watch," "Mr. and Mrs. Peter White," and the burlesque of "Sonnambula" will be presented. Miss Mary Stuart, who made such a great hit in Miggs in "Barnaby Rudge," will make her reappearance. Mr. Harry Beckett is announced to appear at this theatre on Oct. 31st.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE" is the title of a new musical burlesque from the prolific pen of Mr. John F. Poole, announced for production at Tony Pastor's Opera House this evening, Oct. 24th. Louise and Jenny Bartine, aided by nearly all the artists of the company, will appear in the cast. Prof. Morley will introduce a Punch and Judy, in its original form, as given at the English fairs. Gussie Grayton, song and dance artist, who was heartily welcomed during the past week, and Carrie, who made a hit in his Dutch songs, remain. Tony Pastor, whose appearance is never hailed with rapturous applause, nightly sings a number of songs. Nelse Seymour, Frank Kerns, Johnny Wild and others, continue to appear in their special acts. Good business has rewarded their efforts the past week.

"LA ROSE DE SAINT FLOUR," a new comic opera by Offenbach, is announced to be produced for the first time in America this evening, Oct. 24th, at Kelly and Leon's Minstrel Hall, in which the only Leon will assume the character of Lisette. Among the other special acts announced are the "Kneelson Concert," "Fashionable Kate," the "Tea Party" and "Kitty from Cork."

MISS LIZZIE WILLMORE is among the passengers by the steamship City of Brooklyn, which left this port on the 22d for Liverpool.

FANNY JANAUSCHEK closed her brief season at the Academy of Music on the 22d.

"PEACOCK IN DIFFICULTIES," is the title of an original opera bouffe composed by MM. Tiser and Lavalee of this city. Miss Lisa Weber has purchased and will shortly produce it, probably in Boston, Mass.

JULES RAVEL and brothers, the sons of Antoine Ravel, one of the Ravel family of pantomimists, arrived in this city on Oct. 18th, by the City of London. They report that the venerable Jerome, Antoine and Francois are residing in Toulouse, France, and are in the enjoyment of good health.

CARLO PATTI, the conductor of opera bouffe at the Grand Opera House, on Saturday evening, Oct. 22d, after the performance, was presented with a magnificent baton by James Fisk, Jr. It is made of ebony, heavily mounted at either end with gold, which extends up the staff to a distance of some six inches, and in the form of a roll of music, and bears an inscription as follows:—"Presented to Carlo Patti by James Fisk, Jr." It was manufactured by Messrs. Bishop & Rein, jewelers, under the Fifth Avenue Hotel, and cost, we are told, $100.

END OF GROSS RECEIPTS TAX.—Below we give the returns of the gross receipts at our various places of public amusement for the month of September, which will be the last recorded, as the law ceased to be operative with the close of that month:—

Booth's	$41,630	Stadt Theatre	$8,513

Wood's Museum	10,426
San Francisco Minstrels	9,660

J. H. MILBURN, a vocalist and dancer of repute in England, will make his first appearance in this city this evening, Oct. 24th, at the Theatre Comique, in sketches and songs with rapid changes. He was engaged last summer by Mr. Samuel Colville for a tour of this country with his "European Novelties." He made his first appearance in America at Cincinnati, O., Sept. 26th last. Miss Eloise Clyde, who is called the "beautiful shaped" vocalist, will also make her first appearance, and the new trick pantomime entitled "Hanky Panky, etc.," by Charles Abbott, in which he will appear as clown, will be produced for the first time. During the past week Lew Rattler has given some excellent imitations of new celebrated actors in a sketch called "Shakspeare, Mesmerism." Mr. James Maas sang several Dutch songs with effect; Miss Jennie Hughes, who possesses an excellent soprano voice, sang several ballads; William Arlington provoked the mirth of the audience by his very humorous impersonation of the Arkansaw Traveler; Mr. W. B. Harrison, the only English improvisatore; Mlle. Ventaroli has been well received during the week. Augusta and Manzeri executed several beautiful dances, and Charley White the veteran, J. C. Stewart, James Wambold, Frankhurst and Collins, and George H. Dose have appeared in various special acts. The Four Dancing Blondes and Risley's troupe of Dogs and Monkeys make an appearance to-night in addition to those specified above.

BIRCH, WAMBOLD, BERNARD AND BACKUS, in conjunction with their minstrel troupe at San Francisco Hall, continue to attract appreciative audiences, fair in numbers. "Let Me Be" and an act entitled the "Supreme Court," continue the chief features of the programme.

MISS MARION FISKE, a charming young lady of some fifteen summers, aided by her father, Moses W. Fiske, a comedian of repute, are announced to commence a brief star engagement at the Bowery Theatre, this evening, Oct. 24th, when they will both appear in a new drama from the pen of M. W. Fiske, entitled "Little Dick, the New York Boothiack," in which Miss Marion will play Little Dick and sing several songs and execute a number of dances. During the past week Mr. J. McCloskey's drama, "Through by Daylight," attracted good audiences and was acted to the satisfaction of all present. It is of the highly sensational order, and contains many thrilling effects. Several of the local scenes were much applauded.

THE OLYMPIC and Wood's theatre have the cream of the business just now, both houses being crowded nightly.

VERY LONG runs are not in order this season. "Man and Wife" is in its last nights at the Fifth avenue theatre, and "The Two Roses" is announced to be withdrawn on the 29th at Wallack's.

ELECTION EXCITEMENT, it is feared, will interfere with our indoor amusements for a couple of weeks. The mammoth torchlight procession for Thursday night, 27th, will make the auditoriums of some theatres look as "light" as the procession.

THE EUREKA DRAMATIC AGENCY, carried on by Harry Cunningham, at 636 Broadway, has the agency for Chas. Foster's sensational plays.

OF THEATRICALS IN ALBANY, N. Y., our correspondent, "Beppo," writing on Oct. 23d, says:—"Jos. K. Emmett, as Fritz

...mand of applause on his first appearance. Mr. R. L. Stevenson personated Sir John Harrington Snealy, as did Maxwell the part of Isabel Markham. Mrs. Bedley as Emma Skerritt the part of Isabel Markham. Mrs. Bedley Emma Skerritt the part of Isabel Markham. Mrs. Bedley as Edmund Deane. Already vague hints and rumors are about of the production of 'Othello' and 'Hamlet,' while the Christmas pantomime, with Messrs. Charles and Arthur Le Clercq, is hinted at as in preparation. On Saturday evening last, 'Henry Dunbar' was given for the first time with Mr. Wallack in the title role. On Monday evening, 24th, the seventh week of 'Monte Cristo' opens. Mr. Fechter will produce 'Hamlet' on the evening of Nov. 7th.....At the Museum, 'Caught in the Toils' was repeated on Monday and Tuesday evenings, drawing very good houses. Why it did not have a longer run I cannot say, for certainly its merits deserve it. But it has been shelved, and on Wednesday afternoon and evening 'East Lynne' was once more, and for the last time, given. On Thursday, 'Fron Fron' was revived, meeting with tolerable success. The cast remains almost the same as last season, the only change being in the part of Louise, which Laura Phillips assumed in place of Fanny Marsh. The change was neither for the better nor the worse. The play will be continued next (this) week, and 'Fron-Fron' is announced as in rehearsal, while the 'Two Roses' is in active preparation.....The engagement of Barney Williams and wife closes to-night at the Boston Theatre, they having met with a most unusual reception during their stay here. The 'Connie Soogah' has been given during the early part of the week to large houses, and last night the stars took a joint benefit, the house being crowded to overflowing. The bill consisted of the 'Fairy Circle,' in which Mr. Williams appeared as Con O'Carolan and Mrs. Williams as Mecilah, 'It is the Custom of the Country,' with Mrs. Williams as Melissa, and the 'Irish Tiger,' with Barney Williams himself as Paddy Ryan. During the evening Mr. Williams was called out and a speech was demanded of him by his excited admirers. In this speech he thanked his audience for their kindness, saying that this was the pleasantest and most profitable engagement he had ever played in Boston, and he took occasion to express his gratitude to Mr. Selwyn, who had by his thorough and skilful manner of putting the drama on the stage, added so much to their success; then, with a few words of praise and admiration for the great improvement in the appearance of the theatre, he closed his speech. This afternoon, the 'Fairy Circle' and 'Custom of the Country,' will be given, and to-night, for the farewell performance, 'Ireland As It Was,' 'Customs of the Country,' and 'Irish Tiger' will form the attractions. Next (this) week, Lotta will begin an engagement with 'Little Nell' and the 'Marchioness.' You may remember that in July last I gave an account of a somewhat stormy meeting of the stockholders of this theatre, at which, such was the disgust with the way things were managed, a committee was appointed to consider the expediency of selling the establishment. Well, on Thursday last, there was another meeting of stockholders, at which this committee made their report. They estimated the value of the property at about $300,000, and this under ordinary circumstances it ought to sell for, as it could not be built for anything like that amount, the cost having already exceeded $400,000. They had received an offer of $250,000 for the property; but this would require the payment by the corporation of the cost of the recent improvements, which had now amounted to almost $35,000—so that that would swallow up all the funds in the treasury and a year's rent beside. It was the opinion of the committee that if an offer of $250,000 net to the stockholders should be made, it ought to be accepted—and in case no such offer was made, the property should be put up and sold at auction at some future time. The report was then laid upon the table.....The Adelphi will open on Monday evening, 24th, under the management of Mr. H. G. Clarke, for the production of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' with Mrs. G. C. Howard as Topsy. The engagement is but for a single week, and Mrs. Howard will receive support from Mrs. Wheatleigh, Mrs. L. Barton, Charles Nortl, J. J. Grier, W. C. Raymond, Mrs. Prior, Adele Clarke, Minnie Maddern (as Eva) and others. Geo. H. Tyler and Jas. S. Mamitt have rented the Adelphi for the season, and will begin on Oct. 31st. The Kiralfy Troupe, W. H. Bartholomew and others have been engaged.....There is a rumor about that Manager Field, of the Museum, is trying to engage Miss Glynn's services for some Saturday evening to present that of Lady Macbeth, supported by his stock company.....The performance during this week at the Howard Athenæum has not been very good, at least not as good as usual. There is no particular fault to be found with the separate individual efforts, but as a whole things seemed to lack crispness and heartiness. Next (this) week the performance begins with an allegorical tableaux, the 'Star Spangled Banner,' in which the Zavistowski Sisters will appear.]

THINGS THEATRICAL and other wisical the Pacific Slope are thus chronicled by our correspondent, "Sir Troby," under date of San Francisco, October 16th:—"Mr. Chanfrau closed his engagement, which has been uncommonly successful, at the California Theatre, Oct. 15th, when the audience in attendance rivalled in number and enthusiasm that of the night, when, four weeks before, he first presented himself to the public and gave to his friends the impression that the impossible being—save only to the dramatic—vested in Sam. A wretched melo-drama entitled 'The Hidden Hand' was repeated on Monday, to an immense house. The performance was only made bearable by Chanfrau's very clever bit of Ethiopian eccentricity in the character of Wool. The 'Octoroon' came the next night. In it Chanfrau proved beyond dispute his wonderful versatility. The closest comparison defied the possibility of instituting points of similarity between Old Pete and Wool—both are darkies, and nothing but the possession of powers above the average could have created such distinct and well founded individuality for each of the parts as Chanfrau imparted. Mr. A. H. Mayer's fine tenor voice served him a good turn for the first time, as McClosky. The Indian was quite a study as a piece of pantomimic acting in the hands of McCullough, who threw something of the picturesque about it, while his whole appearance in muscular development and litheness of limb made him the ideal savage. Miss Walton as Paul, Edwards as Captain Ratts, Buckley as the Auctioneer and Sedley Smith as Sunnyside, were all excellent in their way. When Chanfrau takes his benefit, he gives evidence of want of familiarity with the footlights. His acting and movements were constrained, and having love-making to do with Zoe (May Howard), placed both her and himself in unfortunate situations. Miss Howard made a magnificent looking octoroon. The lines that came to her were delivered, moreover, with appropriate feeling. Miss Gordon, in her dressing for Dora, gave exhibition of her exquisite taste, and in the 'Hit respectfully to you' role—excepting on the 14th, Chanfrau's benefit, when 'Kit' was repeated—she the balance of the week. On Monday, Oct. 17th, Mr. Dan Bryant and Little Mack are to appear in 'Handy Andy' and 'Danny the Baron.' .....The Alhambra Theatre has done a moderate business, with G. M. Thompson and Frank Drew in comediettas and farces. Mr. Sam Wetherell, treasurer, had a good house at his benefit, 14th, when a Mr. Fallun, produced much wonder at exhibitions of strength in lifting of weights. In the line of the drama, being part of the programme now offered, is 'Middy Ashore,' with Miss Maggie Moore, who has native talent and an aptitude for Irish roles, but is in want of a master of elocution, as the Middy, and Thompson, who plays Tom Cringle with more vigor than art. In the olio Coghill and Cooper appear in song and dance; Miss Adelia Wadsworth in various selections of vocal music, and nigerdom comes in for a show at the hands of various persons; a farce, 'How Vas Your Uncle?' concludes, introducing Thompson in Dutch character, his best forte. Sergeant Burke opens on the 17th in his Lightning Zouave Drill.....MacEvoy's Hibernicon finished a season of five weeks at Platt's Hall, 15th, and is now prepared for a complete tour of the state.....At City Gardens, the bare back riders, supported by his whole company, gave a circus performance on Sunday. Mr. Fish will depart east some time next week.....R. G. Marsh, burlesque actor, has assumed the office of stage manager at the Bella Union, and has made his first appearance there as Jumbo Jum. Dick Carroll is a prominent attraction in song and dance.....Miss Sallie Hinckley has returned from Oregon, where she had the honor of first introducing Sardou's celebrated plays of 'Fron-Fron' and 'Pattes de Velours.'.....Hamilton and Lawler have organized a dramatic company to play in Los Angeles and vicinity.....Mr. Chanfrau opens at Sacramento for one week, 17th, supported by the branch of the California Theatre company under the management of Mr. Joseph Proctor.....Proctor's company has been playing the past week at Marysville and Stockton with fine success. Jas. Carden, J. Caldcart, Walter Leman, E. F. Sheran and Sue Robinson established leading parts of the plays, which included 'School for Scandal,' 'Enoch Arden' and 'Shylock.'"

JOHNNY THOMPSON appears to be making a very palpable hit in his original protean drama, "Jack," in which he is at present performing at the Academy of Music, Albany, as the following notices clipped from local journals prove:—

> Johnny Thompson, the protean actor, was the bright particular star, and he is without exception the best we have ever seen in his line. He appeared in ten widely different characters, each of which he represented to perfection. His jumps from one to the other were surprisingly rapid, and every one of them was hailed with the most enthusiastic applause. His characters include the Irishman, the German, the Chinaman and the African. Besides assuming these with unexceptionable perfection, he proved himself master of some twenty musical instruments, from the French horn to the harp. His Irish character was up to the finest efforts of Barney Williams, and in fact all his acting would stand the test of the closest criticism. The Irish jig by Mr. Thompson and Miss Raymond is only equal to the liveliest attempts of Mr. and Mrs. Williams, receiving a double encore. In a word, it was the unanimous opinion of the large crowd present on Saturday evening, that Johnny Thompson is without a rival on the American stage.—Poughkeepsie Morning News.....'Johnny' Thompson is much superior to Emmett in every respect. His musical talent is marvelous as it is versatile. He performs on fifteen different instruments, all of which he plays remarkably well. His solos on the banjo are capital, but his impersonation of the Irish, Scotch, Dutch, etc., assumes too entirely distinct characters.—Elmira Journal.....

JOHNNY THOMPSON AT THE OPERA HOUSE.—The original and inimitable "Johnny Thompson" appeared in his character of "Jack" at the Opera House and was greeted with rapturous applause. The apparent versatility of this gentleman's talent is an example of what can be accomplished by study, united with close attention and a keen perception. Mr. Thompson's character of detective in Jack, as played by him, is superior to that of Hawkshaw in the "Ticket of Leave Man." His changes, of which there are ten, are made with consummate dexterity, and with a taste that makes it appear as though ten different artists were on the boards. As an Ethiopian delineator he is "immense," as an Irish character, good, as an Italian harpist, wonderful, while his various other characters require more than a consideration of time to make them appear as wanting in merit.—Poughkeepsie Eagle.....Mr. Thompson is a genius of no ordinary mould. He plays on all kinds of instruments, from a cow's horn to a seven octave sugar hogshead, and brings the house down every time. He dances splendidly, sings as a nightingale, and is as easy and lively as a shilling's worth of eels on a hot fire. He sings all kinds of songs, Irish, Scotch, English, French, German and Chinese. He has a fine voice, and well deserved the hit he when achieved last evening. Mr. Thompson will make his second appearance this evening.—Albany Evening Journal.....

OF AMUSEMENTS IN BUFFALO, N. Y., our correspondent, "Type," writes as follows:—"At the Academy of Music, on Oct. 22d, Mr. Albert Aiken concluded a week's engagement. The audiences were fair during the week. 'The Witches of New York' was presented at the matinées and evening performances, 'The Ace of Spades' on Thursday and Friday evenings, and Saturday matinee, and 'The Heart of Gold' on Saturday evening. Mr. Aiken does not, in my opinion, possess any remarkably brilliant talents. The audiences were composed of an almost totally different class of people that is usually seen at the Academy. The Kiralfy Troupe open on the 24th, for one week, making their debut in 'Humpty Dumpty, Jr.,' and 'Up Yard Wells,'.....Mrs. James A. Oates' Burlesque Troupe played to good houses at St. James' Hall on the 21st and 22d. The Fair One with the Blonde Wig' was produced both nights, and at a matinee on Saturday. Mrs. Oates possesses much humor and versatility, and brings out the burlesque in a creditable manner, supported by her excellent company."

ANNIE TIFFANY closed her engagement at the Academy of Music, Omaha, Neb., on Oct. 22d. Mme. Methua Scheller is announced to commence an engagement at twelve nights on Oct. 24th.

AN ACTION OF LIBEL has been commenced against Mr. Storey, of the Chicago Times, by Mr. Crosby, of Crosby's Opera House, Chicago, Ill.

THE WALLACK SISTERS' BURLESQUE TROUPE commence a series of six nights' performances in Mansfield, Ohio, on Oct. 24th.

MARIE SEEBACH is to play Mary Stuart in New Haven, Conn., on Oct. 31st.

A STRONG COMBINATION of dramatic artists has been formed to give six performances at the Opera House, Newark, N. J., commencing Oct. 31st. The management will be under the direction of the artists, and the profits will inure to them. The following ladies and gentlemen compose the combination:—Messrs. Theodore Hamilton, Vining Bowers, L. R. Shewell, Alexander Fitzgerald, Welsh Edwards, Miss Virginia Buchanan, Mrs. Sedley Brown and Mrs. Brutone. The initial performance will consist of the "Lady of the Lake" and "Everybody's Friend."

MISS ALICE PLACIDE, actress, and Miss Fanny Garbonatti, soubrette, have been engaged with Lanier's Dramatic Company.

GEORGE L. AIKEN is billed to perform with a dramatic company in a play called "Fuss," at the Music Hall, New Haven, Conn., on Oct. 24th.

MISS MAGGIE MITCHELL is billed to perform in the Harrington Opera House, Providence, R. I., on Oct. 24th, 25th and 26th.

MR. AND MRS. BARNEY WILLIAMS, on Saturday evening, Oct. 22d, completed at the Boston Theatre, Boston, Mass., one of the most successful engagements they ever played in that city, where they enjoy a high degree of artistic popularity. Could the arrangements of the theatre have permitted it, their engagement could have been prolonged several weeks with profit to the management and the artists, and with great satisfaction to the public. The Boston Post of Oct. 23d, thus speaks of

THE BARNEY OR MR. AND MRS. BARNEY WILLIAMS.—The fare well benefit of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams last evening, at the Boston Theatre, was a great success in every particular. The house was literally packed from parquet to ceiling, and more than a thousand people were turned away unable to obtain admittance. The stars were warmly received and acted with their usual spirit, and to the gratification of the numerous assemblage.

These artists will return to this city, and after a brief period of repose and relaxation, will resume their performances, appearing at the Holiday Street Theatre, in Baltimore, Md., in which city they have not appeared for some years.

A COSTLY SHAT.—About a year ago, in Barre, Vt., a man of considerable wealth and some influence, who held the office of County Commissioner, attended an entertainment given by "That Comical Brown." He took one of the reserved seats without having a ticket therefor and refused either to vacate or pay for it. Brown brought an action against him, and the case was decided in Brown's favor, the jury awarding him damages in the sum of eighty-six dollars and forty cents. With his lawyer's fees, costs, &c., it will cost the County Commissioner some $300. This establishes the fact that the "player fair" have some rights which people even of wealth and influence are bound to respect.

THE PARK THEATRE, BROOKLYN.—The star system now prevailing at this establishment draws excellent business each week, but it comes rather hard on the stock company, requiring, as it does, so much study in getting up different plays every other night or so. That so few errors occur shows that the Park is well supplied with good stock talent, or else the call upon the resources of the establishment would not be so ably responded to. Last week the Florences drew excellent houses, especially on the nights of the "Ticket of Leave Man" and "Ours" were performed. We dropped in to see the former, and especially noticed the excellent performance of Mr. Carroll as Jem Dalton. Indeed, throughout the week Mr. and Mrs. Florence were ably supported by the stock company. Their success was such as to necessitate a new engagement. Mr. and Mrs. Conway are underlined to appear in "Man and Wife,".....At the Olympic, the Eddy and Whalley Combination still proves a success. The two "Dancing Fawns," Misses. Nellie and Lottie, are among the novelties to fill up the week with.

AT AIKEN'S MUSEUM, Chicago, Ill., Watts Phillips' drama entitled "Land Rats and Water Rats" was played during the week ending Oct. 22d. "Man and Wife" is underlined as being in active preparation.

AT MCVICKER'S THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., Lawrence Barrett has appeared during the week in "Rosedale," and was announced to perform on Oct. 24th in a dramatization in five acts of the late Charles Dickens' last novel of "Edwin Drood," prepared expressly for Mr. Barrett by T. C. De Leon, in which Mr. B. will play the character of Jasper, the opium eater.

J. F. NOYES AND SAM RYAN announce in another column that they will open a new theatre in Key West, Florida, on or about Nov. 25th. Artists are wanted. See advertisement.

Musical.

THE ALLEGHANIANS, bell ringers and vocalists, appeared at Masonic Hall, Boston, on Oct. 17th, to a very select audience, consisting mostly of ladies. Mr. J. A. Bonlard, basso, the originator of the company nearly a quarter of a century ago, still sings in his usual vigorous style, and Mr. Walter Field, tenor and funny man of the troupe, kept the audience in a roar of laughter by the funny manner in which he rendered his songs. The performance was ended by the descriptive quartette "The Ship on Fire," sung by Miss Hiffert, Miss Packard, Mr. Field and Mr. Bonlard, which was the gem of the evening. The company appeared in Bethlehem the next day.

MISS CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG'S Grand Concert Company occupy the Opera House, Elmira, N. Y., Monday evening, Oct. 24th, and is followed on the 25th by Mrs. H. M. Smith, assisted by Levy, the cornetist, and others.

A LEADER of orchestra, who understands dramatic business, desires an engagement. Address Frederick Baker, as per advertisement.

THE LE FRANC CONCERT PARTY gave two entertainments in Cleveland, O., recently, to a beggarly lot of empty seats. The entertainments were of a high order, and it is to be deprecated that the musical taste of that city did not encourage them.

MR. ALFRED PHILLIPS, father of Miss Adelaide Phillips, died at Marshfield, Mass., Oct. 16th, after an illness of fifteen months. He was an Englishman by birth, but had been a resident of Boston, Mass., for many years.

THE MISSES GOTTSCHALK, Celestine, Clara and Blanche, gave a grand concert in New Haven on Oct. 19th.

NEW MUSIC.—L. J. Cramer, of No. 254 Bowery, New York, has issued a publication entitled "Sweet Dreams." Words by George Cooper and music by Charles E. Pratt. Also, "Carrie Todd;" song and chorus, by the same authors.

MICHAEL WILLIAM BALFE, the composer, died in London, Eng., Oct. 21st, at the age of sixty-two years. His operas have been received with favor in England and in this country for the past thirty years. Among the most popular of his works were "The Bohemian Girl," "The Enchantress" and "The Puritan's Daughter." At a very early age he evinced talent for music and received instruction from Charles E. Horn. He first commenced his career as a vocalist and sang under the name of Balf the part of Benoni's Figaro, with Malibran and Sontag, at Theatre Italien, Paris. His daughter, Miss Victoria Balfe, also attained an eminent position as a vocalist, and was married to Sir John Crampton, who at one time held the English ministerial portfolio at Washington, D. C. She was, however, divorced from him, and then married a Spanish nobleman, the Duke de Frias. Balfe was born in Dublin, Ireland, in the year 1808, but resided principally in England. He was at one time the manager of the Drury Lane Theatre for an operatic season.

SIGNOR CARLO LE FRANC, assisted by Miss Ida Rosenberg, Signor Susini, and others, gave two concerts at Pike's Music Hall, Cincinnati, on Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 17th and 18th. He did not meet with much pecuniary success.

AN ORCHESTRA LEADER and a good manager are wanted by Duprez & Benedict, who advertise.

THE GRAND ENGLISH OPERA COMPANY organization inaugurated a brief season of opera entertainments at the Pittsburgh Academy of Music on the 17th. "The Marriage of Figaro" was produced on the occasion to a large but not crowded audience. The cast embraced the names of Mrs. Caroline Richings Bernard, Miss Rose Hersee, Mrs. Seguin, Messrs. Albert Lawrence, S. C. Campbell, Brookhouse Bowler, E. Seguin, Arthur Howell and others. Mrs. Richings Bernard as Susanna was received by the audience with a degree of favor akin to enthusiasm. She was in good voice and gave a most acceptable rendition of the character, both as regards singing and acting. Rose Hersee, as the Countess, gave entire satisfaction, and frequently during the evening she was awarded earnest applause. Mr. Campbell's Figaro was excellent, as also was the Count Almaviva of Mr. Lawrence. The latter gentleman has much improved since last season, both in manner and voice. Mrs. Seguin, as Cherubine, was decidedly pleasing. Verdi's "Trovatore" was given on the 18th to a much larger audience than on the preceding evening. All the seats in the house were occupied and eligible standing room was eagerly sought after. Mrs. Bernard had an opportunity of displaying her histrionic as well as lyric ability. "Crown Diamonds" was presented on the 19th to a very fair attendance. "The Bohemian Girl" was given on the 20th to a full and brilliant audience, with Rose Hersee as Arline. The Gipsy Queen was creditably represented by Miss Fannie Goodwin. In some of the scenes the lady was a little timid, but she sang with commendable power and sweetness. Mr. Bowler's Thaddeus was passable. He sang satisfactorily, but his acting was stiff and unnatural. As Count Arnheim Mr. S. C. Campbell was, in a measure, successful. Mr. Seguin's Devilshoof was an artistic performance in every respect. "The Huguenots" was produced on the 21st and "The Rose of Castile" at the Saturday matinee. "The Postillion of Lonjumean" constituting the bill for the farewell performance.

A GOOD TUBA AND A DOUBLE BASS PLAYER can obtain a steady engagement to travel with Lanier's dramatic combination. See advertisement in another column.

THE BERGER FAMILY SWISS BELL RINGERS appeared in Cleveland, O., on Oct. 21st and 22d, and are billed in Buffalo, N. Y., for the 25th, 26th and 27th.

H. C. BARNABEE AND MRS. H. M. SMITH'S BOSTON CONCERT COMPANY is billed to appear in Erie, Pa., on Oct. 26th.

Variety Halls.

OF VARIETY ENTERTAINMENTS in St. Louis, our correspondent, "Agra," writing on the 20th, says:—"The Varieties Theatre presents great attractions this week, both in the way of additions to the company and in a rousing bill. Mr. W. J. Stanton, comedian and pantomimist, late of the Fox and Denier party, opened on Sunday, the 16th inst., as Tom Tape in 'Sketches in India,' and received quite an enthusiastic welcome, as did also Miss Sallie Mason, who re-appeared upon the same occasion after an absence of several months, as Sallie Scraggs. A duett which they introduced in the piece was cleverly rendered and received an encore. After this farce came an olio, in which La Selle ida sang 'Par Excellence' very finely, and Jimmie Leslie gave an essence. Billy Devere, who opened on Thursday, the 13th, did a very good song and dance, and is very funny in his Negro acts. Messrs. Dick Quilter and P. C. Goldrich (first appearance) were good in their double jig, and Sallie Mason's song and dance took immensely. Clara Butler was billed to open Sunday evening, but did not appear until Tuesday, when she made a hit in her songs. The Blonde Can-can by Mlles Oberti, Brunetti, Idalie and Constance is still a feature. The 'Female Brigand' is the afterpiece this week, with Miss Anna Hathaway as Carline, Frank Curtis played Gaspardo, Frank Frayne, Salmagundi, and Hi. Chapman Count Vincenzie. Mr. Barney Mellaughlin, late of this theatre, left for Memphis on the 18th to join the Fox and Denier pantomime party.....The Sixth Street Varieties presented a tolerably good bill this week. Miss Rose Maynard, who opened on the 16th, does the Sailor's Hornpipe very prettily. Billy Pash does a clog, and Charley Murdock a song and dance. Joe Carlisle and Mary Stuart still continue in the company. La Petite Hamday is announced for fancy dance, and Miss Gardner's songs also receive considerable applause. Prof. Porter, ribbon spinner and fire-eater, opened this week, and Dan Hart will put in an appearance on the 23d. This gentleman will assume the stage management in place of Billy Rivers, who goes to Vicksburg. The Matlow can-can is still in full blast, with Miss Clara Dean in the character of Frasky. W. H. Gribbing, dancer and Ethiopian performer, commences on the 23d.....At Carroll's Varieties a good entertainment is given nightly, consisting of songs, negro comicalities, dances, etc. Jimmy Quinn, banjoist and comedian, commenced here on the 18th. Johnny Murphy, Joe Woods, Billy Banks, Adele St. Clair, Maggie Louise, Lucy Hall and others are in the company. J. L. Davis opens on the 23d, with his troupe of performing dogs."

JAMES H. ROGERS, character singer, violinist and general performer, can be engaged. His address is care of this office.

THE ADELPHI THEATRE, Boston, Mass., will be opened for the fall and winter season, on Oct. 31st, by James H. Maffit and Geo. H. Tyler. Variety stars and combinations are requested to apply as per advertisement.

GRONOW HERR, vocalist, recently arrived from England, can be engaged through his agent, Col. T. A. Brown.

J. W. HARDY, comical comedian and vocalist, advertises that he has some open dates which he wishes to fill.

LADIES in every branch of the profession are advertised for by Billy Turner, stage manager of the Opera House, Petroleum Centre, Pa.

FANNY FLORENCE and Viola Howard were the fresh attractions last week at the Metropolitan Hall, Washington, D. C. Wm. Carlton, Irish vocalist, and Maggie Melbourne, "Scottish Nightingale," are billed to appear, the former on the 24th and the latter on the 27th.

ARTHUR destires engagement and are referred to the advertisement of the Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

C. A. GARDNER publishes a card in another column in reply to some statements made by a New Orleans correspondent last week.

A CLOG DANCER is advertised for by Yankee Rogers.

AT THE AGAMENT OF MUSIC, Nashville, Tenn., the business continues brisk. Johnny Smith, Jim Hayes, Mollie Somers and Millie Rose are the latest appearances. Prof. W. F. Rastello and Fannie Hamilton Withdrew on the 15th, and left for Atlanta, Ga. The company consists of Jessie and Lucia Tremont, Lizzie Whalen, Mollie Somers, Millie Rose, Nettie Henderson, Millie Boquet, Johnny Reese, Johnny Smith, Hank Mason, Jim Hayes and Dave Angelo.

AT CAPT. HAMMER'S Theatre Comique, Toledo, O., Charles Atkins and Sage Richardson, in a new double song and dance, and John Fielding, in songs with changes, constituted the fresh attraction for the week ending Oct. 23d.

AT WRAY'S THEATRE COMIQUE, Rochester, N. Y., Emma Posberg appeared on the 17th, and made a decided hit. The business for the week has been good. Lena Clarke has been prostrated by a fit of illness. So writes our correspondent, "Snipe."

L. L. DAVIS and his troupe of trained dogs, having just closed an engagement of three weeks at the Winter Garden, Chicago, commenced an engagement on Sunday evening, Oct. 23d, at Carroll's Varieties, St. Louis, Mo.

"GAMBETTA'S BALLOON; OR, A TRIP TO PARIS DURING THE SIEGE," has been a feature at the Front Street Theatre Comique, Baltimore, during the week. The Shakespearean burlesque of "Richard III," written by Edwards and Ragan, has likewise made a hit. Miss Bessie Sudlow is in the fourth week of her engagement and continues to receive the same flattering reception as heretofore. Annette Galletti has created quite a furore in her superb herped chorean exhibitions. Ada Ayre, a young lady favorably and favorably known to the habitues of the Front, and promoted to a serio-comic vocalist, has met with signal success in her new line of business. Miss Devere has made a change from his banjo solos to the song and dance of "Nicodemus Johnson" and a medley song full of fun. Mons. Cardella's ballets of "La Rose" and "Star of the Night" are fascinating features in the programme. Edwards, in his latest burlesque song, "Driven from Home," elicits hearty laughter and applause. The evening's entertainment concludes with the burlesque and ballet combination in the musical burlesque of "Blue Beard." On Monday, 24th, Kathleen O'Neil, the vocalist, is billed to appear. So writes our correspondent, "Don Juan."

OUR CINCINNATI CORRESPONDENT, dating the 21st, furnishes the following intelligence:—"Sargent's Variety Company, re-inforced by Hernandes Foster as pantomimist, opened for one week at Robinson's Opera House, Monday last, in 'Jack and the Bean Stalk' as a pantomime, together with an olio performance. There are no less than five comedians in this company, headed by Gus Williams, who is a capital character vocalist, the others being Oscar Willis, Fred. McAvoy, Johnny Shay and E. D. Gooding. Besides these there are the Barlow Brothers, clog and jig dancers, who also appear in double songs and dances, and a good female corps, embracing Augusta Lanergreen, Kate Foster, Nellie Lamont, Mollie Bennett and Annie McAvey, character actress and vocalist; Mary Melville, Annie Francis and Bessie Stanley. The Dutch songs of Williams seemed to hit hard each evening, and the programme embraced a variety of good things, but the out of the way situation of the theatre prevented business from being more than moderate.....The Winter Garden received an excellent recruit this week in Miss Nellie Austin, the serio-comic of Lent's Circus, and gets encored several times each evening. Charley Young and Billy Reed, comedians, were also added, and took characters in a local piece entitled 'Three Fast Women of Cincinnati,' most of the company appearing in it, the three fast 'uns being Mollie Russell, Nellie Halloway and Minnie Baker. Harrigan has an original hit at the Red Stockings, styled 'One of Muffin Line,' and he and Richard Welch specialty entitled 'Quakers and Widows,' in which they make a lightning change from roaring Irish to severe Quakerism.....The four end men and the 'Peep at Cincinnati,' continue to make a brisk biz for the Race Street Theatre. Hen Mason does a capital 'change' act this week, appearing in half a dozen odd characters, and showing great versatility. A burlesque ballet called 'Burns' Dream,' is another new thing. No change in the company since last report.....The Alhambra is doing a big business with Harry Alberts' original version of the 'Canean,' and the company continues to be strengthened. The additions this week have been Miss Art Holston, vocalist and character actress, who is good; Miss Adams, comedian and basso, and Johnny Foster, comedian and song and dance artist. Four end men have been put on—Mark Adams, Johnny Foster, Johnny Connor and George Morton. Harry Alberts as Interlocutor. Besides these, are Master O'Brien, a decidedly clever song and dance boy, who improves nightly, and Neal Conway, a splendid cloggist. Annie Florence does up Frailty, in the 'Can-can,' decidedly sensational.....The Academy of Music, on Sixth street, flourishes like an evergreen, with the following company:—Tim Woodruff and John Nealon, comedians; Prof. Henri, middle; Master Willie, song and dance; Hank Devon, the Augusta Sisters (Millie and Lida), Rose Sherman, Augusta Nealon, Mollie Smith and Lizzie Leary."

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Richmond, Va., is doing a flourishing business under the management of Messrs. Nacimen & Co. The company is composed of Jake Budd, stage manager; Dick Parker, Billy Diamond, Tommy Sheridan and Tim Morris, Carrie Bentley, Christie Morel, Emma Devere, Miss Estella Hyams; Harry Clark and Mlle. Morton, Tommy Sheridan does some very funny acts and is quite popular. Billy Diamond and Dick Parker are the greatest favorites Richmond has had for a long time. The former's "Uncle Snow" is a capital performance. A great feature of the performance is four end men—Parker, Diamond, Sheridan and Morris. Chrissie Morel as a singer and Carrie Bentley as a dancer are good performers; so is Emma Devere. Harry Clark and Mlle. Gracie, in their tragedian act, elicit the loudest encores. Miss Estella Hyams was warmly greeted by her numerous friends. Her voice has improved considerably and her songs are for the most part new. So writes our correspondent, "J. E. R.," on Oct. 20th.

OF MEMPHIS MUSIC HALLS, our correspondent writes on Oct. 19th, as follows:—"The act for the better regulation of places of amusement has been enforced at last; the sheriff notified the three variety dancing saloons that, henceforth, 'no wine, spirits, malt liquors or cigars, shall be sold in any place of amusement, etc.' This blow, aimed at the music halls, it is hoped by the framers will crush them out of existence, but whether it will or not remains to be seen.....Miss Nellie Edwards and Miss Ella Sheldon, the former a dashing comic vocalist, the latter a chanteuse, have appeared at the Varieties. They are giving a very satisfactory performance. The company has been strengthened by the engagement of Mr. Walter Bray. Miss Emma Clifton, whose singing and acting is very clever, has made a hit. Miss Nelly Georges is also a favorite. She is very handsome, a real blonde, and has an elegant wardrobe. Miss Lizzie Walker has gained considerable reputation in her act of the 'Active Girl.'.....The Parlor Music Hall is doing its usual business with its fair company."

OF THE MUSIC HALLS IN PITTSBURGH, PA., our correspondent writes as follows:—"The Zanfretta Family reappeared at the Varieties Theatre on the 17th. Jester, Billy Hart and Jimmy Winnett put in an appearance at the same time. The house was jammed up and down stairs, Jester being the great attraction. Miss Fanny Davenport, vocalist, was taken sick on this occasion, but, owing to a serious indisposition, she was unable to appear but one evening. The lady reached this city in indigent circumstances, and was given permission by manager Aims to appear at the Varieties Theatre for one week. After her first appearance Mr. Aims presented her with $25 and released her from a week's professional duties. Billy Hart and Tommy Winnett are creditable performers in their several specialties. Hart's 'Bounding Odetson' received applause and an encore. One of the most attractive features of the programme this week has been Alex. Zanfretta's tight rope performances. He is unquestionably fine in this line. Mlle. Zanfretta's songs are received with repeated encores. Business has been good all the week. The departures on the 24th will be A. J. Talbot, J. E. Carton, Emma Miles, Miss Josie, Frank Bell and Lizzie Lagrange. The new faces will be Cool Burgess, C. A. Gardner and Jule Keen. On the 31st inst the Lisa Weber Troupe open at this house."

AT SMITH'S OPERA HOUSE, East Saginaw, Mich., the entertainments served up nightly are excellent. Frank Bennett, who has succeeded Hank Goodman as stage manager, is likely to prove a favorite. The company now consists of Miss Lou Davis, Miss Nellie Huntley, Cecile, Viola Clifton, who, in addition to her regular line, performs a very creditable cornet solo nightly, Miss Lizzie Benedict, Messrs. Frank Bennett, Charles Walters and Charles Gulday.

PEDANTO, gymnast, can be addressed at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, Pa.

LADY VOCALISTS, danseuses and comedians are wanted for the Theatre Comique, Toledo, Ohio. See advertisement.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Detroit, Mich., business has been fair the week ending 23d inst. "Detroit in 1970" was presented the entire week. F. H. Jefferson and wife (Ella La Rue) closed their engagement, of eight weeks, on the 22d inst. Mr. Jefferson is a comedian of merit, some of his negro acts being immense. The Brunell Sisters and Katy Le Roy are to put in an appearance on the 24th. The Lawrence Troupe go to Ann Arbor, Mich., for one week, commencing Oct. 24th, after which they appear at Young Men's Hall, Detroit, Mich., for a few nights, assisted by "Little Vic, the Child Wonder," and other talent. So writes our correspondent "Frank."

BOWLINA TISDALE, character vocalist, put in an appearance at the Varieties Theatre, Norfolk, Va., on Oct. 15th. She is a very good card and dresses splendidly. Paul Keyser, song and dance and clogist, commenced on the 17th. Fannie Florence closed on the 15th and left for Washington, D. C. Mlles Lola and Victoria Rose, dancers, are billed to appear on Oct. 24th.

MONS. D'ATALIE AND MLLE. ANGELA publish a card in another column that they are not in any way connected with the French Wrestlers, and that their engagements hereafter, under the management of Mr. Samuel Colville, will be entire ly separate and distinct from them.

Negro Minstrelsy.

WANDERING MINSTRELS.—Recently a band of wandering negro minstrels entered Johnstown, Missouri, and advertised an evening performance in the town hall. The building used by the minstrels was a two story frame, the only one, in fact, adapted for such purposes in the town; and the upper room was chosen by the barnt cork gentry wherein to perform. Now, it so happened that there was to be a revival in Johnstown, and in the lower room of the same building was to be the meeting. Accordingly, at early candle lighting, the lower room was come apparent that the latter was likely to prove a success, not only in drowning the preacher's voice, but in attractiveness, for more than one half the congregation were endeavoring to keep time with their feet to the swelling notes above. Gradually the pious members wound out and went aloft until the worthy minister had scarcely a dozen Christians left to encourage him in his soul saving efforts. In the meantime, the hall above, which contained only six or eight when the music struck up, was now crowded to suffocation, and the minstrels reaped a rich harvest from the revival.

BILLY EMERSON'S MINSTRELS, who closed in Louisville, Ky., on Oct. 15th, did the largest business ever seen in that city. The troupe sadly need Budworth and Wilkes, or substitutes. As it is, Billy Emerson is the attraction, and it is his songs and dances that draw the houses. The troupe left for Frankfort on the 16th.

MORRIS BROTHERS' MINSTRELS appeared in Mechanics' Hall, Worcester, Mass., on Oct. 22d.

DUPREZ & BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS gave one of the most satisfactory minstrel performances ever witnessed in Weisiger Hall, Louisville, on the 17th inst. Every act was carefully put on the stage, and was free from all vulgarity. This combination is considered one of the monarchs of the "burnt cork" profession.

DELEHANTY, HINGLEN AND BLOODGOOD'S COMBINATION appeared in Sunbie, N. Y., Oct. 19th; Erie, Pa., 21st and 22d, and is billed to appear in Cleveland, O., 24th and 25th.

CARR AND KANAWA'S MINSTRELS are billed to appear at the Opera House, Springfield, Ill., on Oct. 27th and 28th.

HARRY MACARTHY'S EXCELSIOR MINSTRELS appeared in Metropolitan Hall, Raleigh, N. C., five nights, commencing Oct. 18th.

IN OUR MENTION of the death of Charley Pettingill, in our past issue, we omitted to state that he left a dearly beloved wife to mourn his loss. During his long illness she was ever by his side, and ministered, with the tender care of a noble hearted, true woman, to his every want. She was considerably known in the profession, whom we feel assured will sympathize with her in her grief. At present she is residing with her mother in Boston, Mass.

BLWOOD'S FEMALE MINSTRELS appear in Toledo, O., Oct. 25th and 29th.

EMERSON'S MINSTRELS have just closed their traveling season, and Billy Em

MISS LEONA CAVENDER

has just concluded very successful engagements in Troy, Albany and Cleveland. Manager Ellsler's letter to Manager Spaulding, in Washington, speaks for itself:—

[COPY.]
ACADEMY OF MUSIC, CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 14, 1870.
FRIEND SPAULDING.—Miss Leona Cavender has just finished a capital week's engagement with me. I am so pleased with her that I think it no more than right to recommend her to other managers, when so much "stuff" is traveling under unworthy reputations. She will be a welcome "Star" with us from this time out, no matter when she may come. Everybody is delighted with her.
Yours truly, JOHN A. ELLSLER, Sr.

IMMENSE SUCCESS OF THE CHAMPION,
GEORGE LEOPOLD.
NEW ORLEANS COMMERCIAL BULLETIN, OCT. 14TH.
ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Among other things noticeable at the Academy last evening, was the first appearance of Mr. Leopold on the horizontal bar. His performance was unique, and we pronounce it equal to anything that has ever been done in this city by even the Hanlons. Besides its feature of strength, dexterity and agility, the act of Mr. Leopold was marked with novelty, which we hardly thought possible in that line. The BULLETIN seldom praises without good cause, and our appreciation of Mr. Leopold will be found far from exaggerated by those who visit the Academy to-night. 30-1t*

DAVIS' DOGS!
WONDERFUL DOGS!
CUNNING AS FOXES!
ELASTIC AS FROGS!
TUMBLING! ROMPING!! STANDING!!! CLIMBING!!!!
Single or double,
Or all combining,
Doing their wonders
With many a slip,
Doing them promptly
Without aid of whip!
Novel their features,
Wonderful crouch!
None ever like them was
E'er seen before.
None, when they're gone,
Will e'er be seen more.
Say, John L. Davis,
How, mercy save us,
Could you have found it,
To so get round it,
That every command
They should so understand?
'Tis a wonder,
By thunder!
A kind of a mystery
In all canine history.

A PUZZLE,
OUR BRAINS TO BEFUZZLE,
AND MUZZLE.
WONDERFUL DOGS!
DAVIS' DOGS!!
Quite APPROPOS are their titles
For their masters,
"FANNY" (the mother), "GIN," "BRANDY" and "SWEETNESS."
With "SUGAR," to add a desirable texture,
And last, but not least, the comedian, "DEXTER."
These six little creatures,
These wonderful features,
All should behold!
None ever like them was e'er seen before,
Half of their wonders cannot be told;
None, when they're gone,
Will e'er be seen more.

The Great Emerson Minstrels.
This company, on its second tour, has just closed one of the most successful engagements ever known in the annals of minstrelsy, including St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans and Mobile, and is pronounced by the press and the public to be one of the greatest combinations of artistic talent ever concentrated in one organization. The whole under the immediate personal supervision of BILLY EMERSON, the most artistic song and dance man, the best general comedian, and the most popular Ethiopian delineator and favorite of the public who ever appeared in this or any other country, and he takes pleasure in announcing to his friends and the public generally that he has secured WOOD'S THEATRE, Cincinnati, in which he opens on Oct. 24th, 1870, on which occasion MR. EMERSON will be assisted by a large and talented company, comprising some of the most prominent members of the minstrel profession, and will present an entertainment, chaste, pleasing and artistic. The company as it now stands is as follows, viz.:—BILLY EMERSON, J. H. BUDWORTH, E. M. HALL, GEORGE and CHARLEY REYNOLDS, FOSTER LEE, GEO. W. JACKSON, COL. P. MURPHY, THOS.
